

Wounded Car Thief Recovering, He And Pal Await Hearing

Joseph Foley and James McGill await hearing on Grand Larceny Charge—Girl Companion Is Released After Questioning.

Joseph Foley, the youth shot by patrolman Elbert Soper Thursday afternoon on Ten Broeck avenue when he failed to obey the officer's command to halt, today was reported as recovering satisfactorily at the Kingston Hospital.

James McGill, who surrendered to Officer Soper after his pal had been shot, was arraigned before City Judge Culliton this morning and was held for a hearing later. This will take place probably when Foley is well enough to appear in court.

Josephine Guzik, the girl who was with the young men when Patrolman Soper endeavored to arrest them for the theft of Arthur Hermann's Chevrolet coach, was released by the police yesterday afternoon after she had been questioned. Miss Guzik, who resides at 331 Abeel street, told Chief J. Allan Wood and Sergeant James V. Simpson she met Foley and McGill Wednesday night and that they made a date with her to go swimming Thursday afternoon. They called at her home with the Chevrolet, which she did not know was stolen, and started on the way to a swimming place. Miss Guzik had on her bathing suit when arrested. As far as the police could learn she had no connection with the theft of the car.

A Thrilling Experience. However, the girl told the police that when she met the two youths Wednesday, she rode with them in a Buick sport roadster almost to New York. They wrecked the car at Central Valley, running it off the road. In the accident Miss Guzik received bruises about the arms and legs, requiring the attention of a physician.

After wrecking the Buick, Foley, McGill, Miss Guzik and another girl, whose name was kept out of the story, started to hitch-hike to Kingston. They got a ride with a tourist. Arriving in this city, the girl went home. Foley and McGill went to sleep in a parked car on Andrew street.

A resident of the street, noticing the two early in the morning, notified the police. They were picked up by Officer Urban Healey and brought to the city hall for questioning. After telling their story of being just hitch-hikers, and giving the names of several reputable families here as relatives, they were released. This did not occur until after the local people had been communicated with by the police.

Hermann's Car Stolen.

Thursday afternoon about 2:20, Arthur Hermann of 83 Andrew street phoned the police that his maroon colored Chevrolet coach had been stolen from in front of the store at Broadway and O'Neil street. Officer Urban Healey on duty at headquarters signaled five patrolmen in the city and within five minutes every policeman had description of the car, its license, 7D6543, and orders to capture the thief.

Communities surrounding Kingston were notified by Officer Fred Stoudt, secretary to Chief Wood, of the theft by teletype and within 10 minutes a police net was spread for the apprehension of the car thieves.

Soper on the Job. Officer Elbert Soper, doing patrol duty on his motorcycle, rode to the city hall immediately upon hearing the signal horns along Broadway calling for police. He was given the license and description of the car and started out to assist in the search.

On upper Broadway near Albany avenue he spotted the car and gave chase. The two youths gave no heed but increased speed. Soper caught up with them on Ten Broeck avenue after a chase through several streets, and the thieves jumped out of the car while it was running. It smashed against a tree doing about $40 worth of damages.

Miss Guzik got out of the auto. She was taken into custody by Officer Soper, but could give no information regarding the theft of the car. Marshall Miller of the Kingston Fire Department, riding by in his car, stopped to assist the policeman. Miller saw the two making their getaway through a vacant lot, headed for the West Shore railroad tracks.

Soper left the girl in Miller's charge and started after the escaping youths. He ordered them to halt but they refused. Then he drew his .33 calibre revolver and fired into the air. The shot seemed to make the two run faster. Soper then aimed at Foley and hit him in the left leg. He dropped, urging McGill to continue, but instead his pal halted and threw up his hands.

The policeman placed both of the men under arrest and then proceeded to give first aid to the wounded man. He made a tourniquet out of a rope he found nearby, placing it on the leg of Foley to stop the flow of blood. The youth was bleeding freely.

Policemen Wesley Cramer and Fred Stoudt went to the scene of the shooting in the city ambulance and removed Foley to the Kingston Hospital. Dr. Fred Snyder attended him. The physician did not have to probe for the bullet as it had passed through the thigh of the young man's leg, making a hole all the way through it, from back to front.

Dr. Snyder said today that Foley's

President Appeals To 5,000,000 Employers To Join The N. R. A.

Washington, July 21 (AP)—Every citizen today was summoned to a covenant with President Roosevelt to re-employ the jobless millions by Labor Day.

To more than 5,000,000 employers was addressed a request from the President to join his National Recovery Administration in a mass attack on the depression by voluntary agreements to lift wages and shorten hours.

To the public went an open appeal for cooperation "by supporting and patronizing employers and workers who are members of the N. R. A." signers of the presidential agreements for boosting national purchasing power.

Powerfully driving this war-like plan for unifying the country in creating reemployment was a carefully mapped "campaign of education" that brusque Hugh S. Johnson said will "saturate the country with the hope of this thing."

President Roosevelt himself will take to the people the plan he and Johnson agreed upon finally late last night.

"I'm just as certain it will work as I am sitting here," said Johnson, back at his desk after the presidential conference. "I'm staking everything on it."

The heart of the plan:

Every employer will receive through the mail July 27 an agreement addressed to him by President Roosevelt. Upon signing, this binds him to maintain a fixed minimum wage and not to exceed a fixed maximum work week during "the president's emergency re-employment drive" from August 1 to December 1.

The basic hours, labor and wages: Child labor outlawed.

$14 to $15 a week minimum and a 40-hour week for so-called white collar labor.

Thirty to 40 cents an hour minimum for a 35-hour week and 5-hour day maximum for factory and mechanical labor.

Equitable readjustment of pay above the minimum.

Every signer receives a certificate and government badge showing the seal of N. R. A. (National Recovery Administration) and the words: "Member N. R. A. We do our part." This badge may be displayed on all equipment, goods, communications and premises. The signer may appeal for adjustments if a hardship is worked.

"We're going to appeal to the public to support the people who agree," Johnson said. "I believe we can create a psychology stronger than in war. We already have the churches and fraternal societies lined up."

For every consumer who wishes to cooperate and become a member of the N. R. A. there will be a badge issued upon signing of this statement: "I will cooperate in re-employment by supporting and patronizing employers and workers who are members of N. R. A."

Johnson exhibited a chart he called "the only significant chart there is." It showed that values have shot far upward, leaving purchasing power behind.

"It is inevitable that these must move together for prosperity," he said. "So the stock market crash isn't such a bad thing after all."

Even as the new voluntary plan was completed, the industrial administration continued hearings on codes proposed by different industries. Today's included lumber, coal and salt, shipbuilding and electrical manufacturing, while steel has been set for July 21.

Orchards are reported showing the effects of the dryness, gardens have dried up. Some oat crops were reported spoiled.

Central New York reported many streams dried up and water being carried from lakes and ponds, but no "critical emergencies." In western New York most counties are hard hit, "tremendous loss" being reported in the Niagara-Orleans fruit belt.

Cohoes put all its emergency filtration equipment into use. Some Troy residents complained of low pressure, due to the great demand for water.

SUSPENSION OF TRADING IN FUTURES HITS LONDON

London, July 21 (AP)—News of the suspension of trading in futures on the Chicago and Kansas City grain exchanges fell like a thunderbolt today in the midst of discussions on a proposed wheat restriction agreement, but was described as "intensifying the determination to reach an accord."

Manuel E. Malbran and Thomas A. Le Breton of Argentine read the dispatch announcing the suspension of trading and appeared very worried. Then Senator Malbran smiled and said, "Buenas Noticias." ("Good News.")

One by one the negotiators came from the conference room and gathered around the huge bulletin board.

Blackened Pastures And Lack of Water In July Record Drouth

Cities and Towns Suffer As Water Supplies Fall in Several Places—Cattle Suffer From Lack of Food and Water.

Albany, N. Y., July 21 (AP)—Sun blackened pastures and parched water supplies dotted drouth-suffering New York state today, as the sun quickly dried up the rainfall from a few scattered thunderstorms.

Cattle noted the ground vainly for water and grass. Farmers at many points drove cattle to barns to set hay and water from tanks. Milk production was falling off rapidly.

Canandaigua sent a 1,200 gallon street flusher to the relief of waterless farms.

Annual Church Picnic.

The annual picnic of Trinity Lutheran Church will be held at Hasbrouck Park Wednesday, August 2, in case of rain the next day. The picnic will last from nine o'clock in the morning until dark. Refreshments at reasonable prices. Games for adults and the Sunday School children will be played. The church council will play a baseball game with a picked nine. The public is invited.

Would Boycott German Goods.

Amsterdam, July 21 (AP)—An international Jewish conference called in protest against the treatment of Jews in Germany was on record today as favoring a boycott of German goods and shipping. Samuel Untermyer of New York, who was named president, called on the League of Nations to act for the protection of Jews.

Big Reception Held Today in New York for Balbo and His Fliers

New York, July 21 (AP)—To the cheers of an enthusiastic throng descended by police as the greatest since the welcome to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh six years ago, New York city today gave its official reception to General Italo Balbo and his 96 gallant Italian fliers.

The reception began shortly after noon with a parade up lower Broadway from Battery Park and was climaxed at City Hall with an address by Mayor O'Brien.

Police estimated at least 50,000 jammed the famous street and City Hall Park crying "Viva Balbo!" and "Viva Italia!" as the colorful procession wound its way uptown.

Ticker tape, confetti and torn leaves from telephone books fell like rain as workers in the tall buildings along the route rushed to windows and at times it seemed the vision of the drivers of the dozens of automobiles in which the fliers rode might be impeded.

The procession was led by an escort of honor headed by Colonel Joseph A. Marmon, regimental commander of the 16th U. S. Infantry. General Balbo's automobile was next and behind him for several blocks stretched the cars carrying his fellow officers.

General Balbo responded to the cheers with a broad smile and quick salute and appeared to be thoroughly enjoying the continuous ovation.

More than 1,500 uniformed police were along the line of procession, but there were no disturbances.

At city hall the fliers made their way through a straining lane to the steps of the Municipal Building where they were greeted by Mayor O'Brien and his aides.

The mayor's address was several thousand words in length and welcomed the Italians to what he described as "the largest Italian city in the world."

Final Rites Paid to Late Leader Editor

Many Friends And Relatives of Thomas J. Comerford Attended Funeral Services, Paying Last Tribute to Prominent Kingston Man.

St. Joseph's Church was filled to the doors this morning with relatives and friends of Thomas J. Comerford, late Editor of The Kingston Daily Leader, who were present to pay their tribute to the memory of a loved one and a friend.

A string quartet from Woodstock, admiring and devoted friends of Mr. Comerford, Pierre Henrotte, first violin; Leon Kaplan, second violin; Gerald Kunz, viola; Engelbert Roentgen, cello, played a beautiful Bach "Aria" as the prelude.

The solemn Mass of requiem was offered by the Rev. Louis M. Cusack, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, with the Rev. William P. F. Dooley, of the Church of the Holy Name, Wilbur, deacon and the Rev. H. E. Herdgen, assistant at St. Peter's Church, sub-deacon. Visiting clergy were the Rev. Father Flanagan of Phoenixia, the Rev. Father Phant of East Kingston and the Rev. Father Fitzgerald, chaplain at the Benedictine Hospital.

The procession, "Miserere" and the Gregorian Mass were sung by the young people's choir of St. Joseph's Church, under the direction of Mr. J. W. Leary with Mrs. Frank Raftery, the organist of the church, presiding at the organ. At the offertory "Ave Maria" was sung by William Rabble, who sang, following the blessing, "O Jesu Dulce."

The solemn "Adagio" from Debussy's String Quartet was played by the string quartet as the Postlude.

A profusion of beautiful flowers were the loving gifts of the host of friends of the man who loved flowers. One floral piece was from President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Fourth Degree Assembly of Kingston Council, No. 275, Knights of Columbus, acted as an honorary escort with Supreme Court Judge John T. Loughran, District Attorney Cleon E. Murray, Supreme Court Justice Daniel V. McNamee, Judge Harry E. Schrick, chairman of the Ulster County Democratic Committee, William T. DeWitt, E. Frank Flanagan, Dr. Samuel Thomas, Merton L. Goldrick, Thomas Moylan, as honorary bearers.

Kingston Council, Knights of Columbus, Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's Church, Mayor Conrad E. Heisselman and city officials, Democratic Clubs of the county and city, the entire Kingston Daily Leader staff and many distinguished citizens and guests from out of town were in attendance at the service.

A large contingent of the State Troopers acted as an honorary body guard to the funeral cortege as it wound its way to St. Mary's Cemetery where the interment took place.

FENG WILL FIGHT FOR RECOVERY OF MANCHURIA

Peking, China, July 21 (AP)—General Feng Yu-Hsiang again defied the central government today in a telegram saying he would fight for the recovery of Manchuria "as long as one breath is left in my body."

General Feng, "China's Christian general," whose independent campaign in North China led the Nationalist regime to send 50,000 troops against him and caused apprehensions for a Sino-Japanese truce, sent the message to Chiang Kai-Shek, central government generalissimo.

New Paltz Man Dead As Truck Ran Off Bank Into Walkkill

Raymond C. Dunham, 48-Year-Old Butcher, Killed When Truck Crashed Through Guard Rail and Over 40-Foot Embankment in Walkkill River Near Dashville Power Plant—Accident Happened Early This Morning—Grappling for Body—Central Hudson Company Aids Authorities.

Raymond C. Dunham, 47 year old New Paltz butcher, was killed this morning about 6:20 o'clock, when his butcher truck crashed through the guard rail and went over a 40 foot embankment into the Walkkill river about 300 feet above the Dashville power plant of the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company. Apparently Dunham was alone at the time and there are no witnesses to the accident.

The accident happened at a sharp curve on the Kingston-New Paltz highway beyond the power station. The broken rail was discovered by a passerby who made an investigation and noticed the butcher truck upside down in about nine feet of water at the bottom of the perpendicular bank. Employees at the power plant were notified and immediately the Central Hudson Company employee notified Corporal Norman Baker at New Paltz and from the number of the car it was learned that it was the butcher wagon of Mr. Dunham.

Sheriff Solyneux was also notified and Deputies Molyneux and Vredenburg responded. Corporal Baker and Trooper and Kielen went to the scene and Coroner Conner and Arthur Keator of the coroners' office went to the scene while a search was made for the body.

The cooperation of the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company deserves the greatest commendation. Several trucks and a number of employees hastened to the scene and the boat at the power station was made available. At first it was not known whether there was anyone in the car or not. A search made from the boat disclosed that the body was still in the truck. In an effort to secure the body the floor boards of the car, which was resting on its top, were pushed in and before it could be secured the body floated down the stream.

There is considerable current at the spot and the body floated away from the men in the boat. It was again observed two or three times but before the boat could get to it had disappeared in the rocky water. The fact that the body floated when released from the truck indicates that Mr. Dunham may have been dead when the body struck the water and the absence of water in the lungs caused it to float away when it was freed from the truck.

Two of the large trucks of the Central Hudson Company, directed by Mr. Corby of the company, immediately hooked on the truck and through winches turned the car over and hauled it free from the water to ascertain whether there had been anyone else pinned in the truck when it went into the water.

The point where the truck left the road is at the peak of a grade on a sharp turn. Had the truck gone over the bank 10 feet further east it would have lodged in a clump of hemlocks and probably not gone over the steep embankment into the creek. At the point where it did go over there is a perpendicular bank at least 40 feet high and apparently the truck was catapulted over the brink without touching the sides of the bank as it crashed into the water at the foot of the cliff.

After the truck had been hauled free from the water it was seen that the top was wrecked. Wreckage floated down stream but apparently Dunham was alone for no other bodies were found. When determined that no others were pinned in the car the gas company trucks proceeded to haul the truck up the bank with winches to the roadway.

During the time the truck was being hauled out traffic was stopped and the big trucks hauling sand and stone to the highway job just beyond Perrine's bridge were sent back.

A large crowd gathered at the scene to watch operations and the troopers and deputy sheriffs were kept busy directing traffic and keeping people away from the activities lest they be injured.

There are no marks on the face of the cliff to indicate that the truck struck the bank in its plunge and apparently it shot off the road and without interference into the creek.

At Dashville power plant there was but one generator working and there was but little current in the creek until the company ordered the gates opened in an effort to carry the body down stream into nets which cover the sluiceways. As the water dropped the current increased and grappling operations which had been undertaken near where the body was last seen were abandoned in the hope that the body would float down and be caught in the nets. A large amount of water was drawn off before the storage was reduced and the gates again closed.

After the reservoir had dropped several feet the gates were again shut and the screens pulled but the operation had been unsuccessful. Grappling was again resumed with the idea that the body had been caught on submerged wreckage or on the many jagged rocks which cover the bottom.

Old Bakery Truck Used as Hearse

Hugh O'Neill, Driver of Machine, Informed Health Authorities Bakery Truck Was Used As Hearse—Morris Miller Says Truck Was Turned In Two Weeks Previous and Is No Longer Carrying Baked Goods.

The board of health recently had a strange case reported to it for investigation. It was that of using a bakery truck to transport a corpse from this city to Providence, R. I.

According to Hugh O'Neill of Ann street, Morris Miller, baker of 58 Broadway, transported the body of Philip Jagolinzer from Kingston to Providence on July 9 in the truck used by Mr. Miller to deliver bakery products.

The story goes that O'Neill, hired to drive the truck, received only $5 for the trip instead of $10, the price said to have been agreed upon prior to starting.

Philip Jagolinzer, a resident of Kerhonkson, died at the Kingston Hospital on Sunday, July 9. He had been operated on for general peritonitis.

The body, reports say, was turned over to an undertaker, who in turn gave it over to Morris Miller, the baker, to be taken to Providence. It was not embalmed, as far as could be learned, but was wrapped in wax paper and put in an undertaker's basket. The truck in which the body was carried, said O'Neill, was the No. 9 International used by Miller to deliver bakery goods, it was said at the health board.

Health Officer L. E. Sanford and John Reis, sanitary inspector, examined the truck after the incident had been reported. Dr. Sanford said at the time of examination the truck showed no signs of contamination from the body, so he could take no official action only to order Miller to keep his bakery trucks clean.

Miller denies using the truck specified, but says he transported the body in another truck, an old one that had been abandoned for bakery purposes and that is not now, had not been in two weeks, and never again will be used for bakery goods delivery.

Mattern Awaiting Word From Backers

Nome, Alaska, July 21 (AP)—Greeted by his relief expedition, Jimmie Mattern, round-the-world flier, today awaited further word from his New York backers about his future activities, at the same time seeking further news of the progress of his rival, Wiley Post.

In a big Soviet seaplane flown by Pilot Levantovsky, a Russian flier, Mattern made the 500-mile flight here yesterday from Anadyr, Siberia, near where he crashed on June 14 on his globe-circling flight. The plane arrived at 1:10 p. m. (7:10 a. m. eastern standard time) yesterday. Within six miles of Nome, they reported, they ran out of gas and were compelled to land, before resuming their flight.

Another pilot, two mechanics and a navigator made up the remainder of the seaplane's crew. They planned to remain here until tonight or tomorrow, before returning to Siberia.

Mattern still wishes to complete his globe-circling flight to New York, he said, but his plans are not definite. The plane in which he left New York on June 3 is a wreck—50 miles from Anadyr.

The seaplane was dispatched to Mattern's aid by the Soviet Government.

Il Duce May Pay U. S. Visit Soon

New York, July 21 (AP)—The New York American says Premier Mussolini, elected by the reception given General Italo Balbo in the United States, may visit this country shortly.

The Italian leader, the paper says, may come to confer with President Roosevelt on world peace and economics.

Generoso Pope, chairman of the mayor's reception committee to Balbo, is quoted as making the disclosure after a conference with Balbo. He did not give Balbo as authority but he said the Italian minister "hoped Mussolini would be able to come to the United States soon."

Blond Princess Given High Office As Head of Italian Women Fascists

By ANDRÉE BERDING

Rome (AP)—A princess, blond and elegant, distantly related to King Victor Emmanuel, has become head of the "Fasci Femminili," or women's section of the fascist party, with headquarters in Rome.

Princess Bianca Pio di Savoia, 35 years old, thus has been called to occupy the highest political post any woman in the kingdom may fill.

Grants First Interview

She has direct charge over 11,374 women and in ceremonies is the ranking representative of 200,000 fascist women.

In granting her first interview Princess Bianca kept the appointment in her sumptuous office in the historic Brancchi palace, headquarters of the Rome fascists. She wore a black silk blouse, black broadcloth skirt, a long double pearl necklace. Her light hair was carefully coiffured and her green-blue eyes smiled a welcome.

She talked in a low, cultured voice, of women in sport. "Girls can derive a great advantage from sport, provided they practice it rationally," she said. "They should be permitted sports that do not involve too much fatigue and exhausting preparation such as required by the Olympic competitions."

In this she was restating the fascist doctrine with regard to women in sports. Italy did not send women to the Los Angeles Olympics.

Poor Remember Her

Princess Bianca spoke with enthusiasm of social service work which is the chief activity of the women fascists. She herself was for years head of the Garbatella fascist group. Garbatella is the poorest district in Rome and thousands of families there owe to her an alleviation of their pinched situations.

Even after her recent promotion, Princess Bianca, by her own wish, has kept charge of the district.

"It has given me and still gives me great satisfaction," she said.

She revealed that last winter the fascist social service gave assistance

She has also devoted much time to the maternity and infancy organization. The "Messaggero," of Rome, commenting on her appointment, said: "It is enough to remember the tact, intelligence and alacrity she demonstrated for two years in directing the women fascists in one of the poorest sections of the city, the Garbatella, in order to judge how opportunity is her selection."

troubly-beautiful about front. The sign said: "If you must touch this paint, touch it here."

Room at Tugary

New York—Manhattan's first copy-run on the street basis as a leading library—in proving a success. More than 150 underprivileged children of the lower East Side are registered for the privilege of borrowing tape. The demand exceeds the supply.

Maybe It's A Horse

Chicago—Taking cognizance of a rumor he had dropped dead, Alderman John J. Coughlin, sometimes called "bath house" said: "It must have been a horse by that name."

Watch Them Scholastic

Chicago—Watch your step: The National Leather and Shoe Finders' Association heard a prediction from its secretary, George A. Knapp, that the price of repair work is to go up from 10 to 15 per cent.

KRIFFLEBUSH

Kripplebush, July 21.—The Sunday School will be held Sunday morning, July 23, at 10 o'clock standard time. There will be no preaching services on this day.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. George Shea for a long and happy married life. Mrs. Shea was formerly Miss Eleanor Smith of Kerhonkson.

To taste right food must be seasoned right

—every good cook
knows that

To Satisfy—a cigarette has to be seasoned just right

You buy food—steak, flour, corn meal, or fruit—it is cooked and brought to the table and tastes just fine. While the same food, not cooked by somebody else, may not taste right at all. That's the difference between cooks—knowing how to season food.
It's somewhat like this with cigarettes. Many kinds of cigarettes have good tobacco, but they are not mixed right; and then again they are not seasoned with the right amount of the right kind of Turkish Tobacco.

Chesterfields are seasoned just right—they are milder and taste better.... and that's why They Satisfy.

Chesterfield

SMARTLY TAILORED
BY CHERRY FURNISHES

The casual tailored suit, shown to the right, with its swaggy topcoat, chic shoes and cavalier bag, is characteristic of the latest mode for short-town and travel wear. The hat is of straw with an organdie bow and band, and the blouse is of striped shirting silk. Remove the topcoat of this handsomely tailored three-piece and there is disclosed a clever jacket and skirt suit. The suit, above to the left, of men's cloth is in correct tailored form from shoe to hat. Note the series of bracelets and the tailored bag. The little sailor has one of the very new high-back crowns.

Gun Metal Leather Used in This Season's Shoes

Gun metal leather is one of this season's contributions to new and different footwear—and shoes of it solve the problem of one pair for gray, blue and black outfits.

Because of the nature of gun metal shoes styled in it are generally without much decoration. In some models it is combined with suede.

SHEPHERDESS HAT
By CHERRY FURNISHES

Here is one of the very latest models in wide-brimmed hats. It is one of the very new shepherdess shapes. You will observe that the crown is very shallow and that it is not pulled down to fit the head like a cap as we have been in the habit of doing. Also the brim dips over one eye, which is a characteristic feature of this season's models. It is well to take note of these details in selecting your mid-summer chapeau. The model pictured is bandied with colored novelty ribbon. Paris milliners are using quantities of fancy ribbons just now.

String Belts Favored
Knitted string and plaited braid belts are a favorite with sports frocks. A natural colored linen frock has a two inch belt of knitted string—blue, green and red—and a white canvas sports dress is worn with a narrow belt of blue braid.

Sailor Collars In Again
Old-fashioned sailor collars are here again. The new designs are broader than ever, often standing two inches off each shoulder to give the broad-shouldered effect now in vogue.

Sleeve Lengths Vary in New Jackets for Spring

The box type jacket shows interesting new shoulder treatments, such as Lanvin's sleeves with padded or stuffed pleats from shoulder to elbow, and Schiaparelli's carriage pleats on shoulders or sleeve top.

Other jacket or coat sleeves appear in every length, elbow, three-quarter, seven-eighths and full length. And new style sleeves for ensembles are sleeves bagged from elbow to wrist, or from elbow to any chosen sleeve length; wide cuffs to finish elbow or three-quarter length sleeves; slashed sleeves with the dress showing through the slashes, and the usual plain, raglan, and set-in sleeve types.

Skirts Generally Longer Than Worn Last Season

Skirts generally are accepted to be longer this last season—considerably longer. Some houses show only a few sport things above the ankle, all the other daytime skirts touching the ankle bone, and evening ones sweeping the floor.

Waistlines are normal to low except in the mind and modern of Nace. Else Schiaparelli, who continues to place them high, wide and handsome, in an eccentric way.

The 1932-1933 cabbage crop of the lower Rio Grande valley is estimated to have brought producers $1,700,000.

A New Novel by Ruby M. Ayres

BISHOP'S LETTER

BY the morning post there were two letters for George—one from Clifford Asher, telling him that he had called at the hotel again, and that he had gone upstairs, looking for her, and that he had found her, and that he had told her that he loved her, and that he had asked her to marry him, and that she had said yes.

George sighed as she laid it aside and took up the second letter. It bore the stamp of the hotel, and she had just left and was addressed in writing she did not know. Before she read it, she turned to the end to discover the signature, and a little shiver of apprehension went through her as she read it: Bishop Letter.

Why had he written to her? Perhaps Evelyn had insisted that he should, in order to add his upbraiding for the things she was supposed to have done. For the first time George recalled the only words her mother had used to her about divorce. It seemed queer that until now they had almost entirely escaped her memory.

She looked into the neglected garden beyond the window, and for a moment she visualized Bishop's worn, rugged face, with its lines of patient resignation and the big clumsy figure that had always made her think of an imprisoned tiger, beaten into submission by long captivity. "We are both in the wrong box, George, you and I."

He had said that to her once and had added, "We might help each other by being friends." The memory of those words brought with them a pang of remorse.

Had she misjudged him? Hadn't he also said "I should like to help you if I can..."

George shivered as if a cold wind had suddenly swept past her, and almost reluctantly she took up his letter again.

Dear George:
I am not blaming you for going away without saying goodbye to me, but I cannot resist saying that perhaps some day you may realize that I spoke the truth when I once told you that I do not betray a confidence, and that I meant it when I said I would help you if the opportunity ever came my way.

For the rest, do not worry. I believe that in this strange world things always come right for those who deserve that they should.

Yours,
Bishop Letter.

It was a strange letter. George read it through half a dozen times and still felt that she could not entirely understand his meaning.

Had he guessed what her thoughts had been that last morning when she broke away from his kindness? If so he must have been hurt—cruelly hurt.

Had she been wrong to believe Nellie's casual gossip about him? Wasn't it true that he and Bernice—she seemed again to see Bishop's lined face and patient eyes, and her own were suddenly dimmed by tears.

"I'll write to him," George told herself. "I'll write and tell him I'm sorry. He'll understand."

She bitterly reproached herself for her hasty judgment, and yet could she have seen Bishop at that moment her confidence might again have wavered, for he was in the studio, standing gaunt and patient with Bernice Boyd's cloak over his arm, watching while she rehearsed a scene of her new picture.

KILLICK, the wealthy director who had brought her to England, was beside him, a spare, alert man with an eternal frown, which was deeper than usual now as he spoke to Bishop in quick, irritable tones.

"Montague's rotten. He'll ruin the picture. We want a man like Nicholas Boyd. There's a fortune waiting for a man with his face and figure and personality. Why he wanted to go and smash himself up beats me. Film stars can't afford to play the hero in real life, and anyway the girl wasn't worth a curse: there are thousands like her at the door of this studio every day."

"You knew Nicholas Boyd?" Bishop asked.

"Knew him! Should think I did. He hated me though, jealous of his wife." Killick laughed sneeringly. "I should say he had some cause to be jealous; but he knows now that if he'd had any sense he'd have given me a bonus to take her off his hands and a vote of thanks too."

Bishop glanced down at the furry wrap across his arm; it was like Bernice herself—pretty, but entirely negligible.

"What sort of a man was Boyd?" he asked after a moment.

Killick shrugged his shoulders. "Englishman," he said briefly. "A white man, you call him? I expect. Decent enough fellow, too, decent in some ways. I don't owe him any grudge. He's down and out now all right, poor devil."

He rushed away again to enter into a fierce argument with Bernice, who was stamping her foot and on the borderline of tears.

Bishop hunched his shoulders in distaste and turned away, the fluffy cloak slipping unheeded to the floor. "What a life," he muttered, and he thought suddenly of George's brown eyes and sensitive face.

GEORGIE put her head round the kitchen door and looked at Mrs. Drill with wistful eyes.

"Would you like to go to the pictures?" she asked.

Mrs. Drill looked up from a paper-backed novel.

"Pictures! What pictures, miss?" she asked blankly.

"The films," Georgie explained. "We can get the half past two bus to Redham; there's a nice picture house there."

Mrs. Drill hesitated.

"I don't know that I will Miss Georgie, thank you all the same. I've got a bit of rheumatism, and sitting in those hot places don't help matters, thank you all the same."

Georgie smiled and sighed together; she was so tired of her own company that she had been driven to solicit Mrs. Drill's cheery companionship rather than be left any longer to her own thoughts.

She had been home nearly a week now, the longest week she had ever experienced, and in three days' time Edward Bancroft and Mrs. Spears were to be married.

Nobody had offered to buy the Hollies, nobody had even been to look over it although Bancroft had gone to the expense of having a board posted beside the gate, bearing the legend "this desirable residence for sale."

He had told Georgie that she might stay on as long as the house was not sold, "or for a few weeks," he had added, mindful of the fact that the house might never be sold, and Georgie had agreed, not knowing what else to do.

She had not heard a word from Evelyn, and Bishop had not replied to her shy, apologetic letter. Apparently they had both done with her.

Yesterday Clifford Asher had been down to see her. Georgie did not like to think of that last meeting with him, and today he was sailing for South America.

She had sent him a telegram to say goodbye, but as she stood in the village post office hesitating whether to put "Love from Georgie" or just "Georgie" a sudden doubt had come into her mind.

Was she making a mistake in sending him away? His love would have been something out of the deplorable—something to lean on, to be sure of.

And after all she had put "with love," realizing that she did love him as a friend, and that as Nicholas had once said to her "it might help."

Nicholas had not written to her; at first she had thought he might—had almost hoped, forgetting that he did not know where she was to be found.

"Well, I think I'll go to the pictures," she said with an effort. "I shan't be in to tea, and you need not wait if you want to go, Mrs. Drill."

In the movies she always felt nearer to Nicholas; it was as if she looked at wonderfully impossible places where once he had lived and moved.

"Take your umbrella, Miss Georgie, it's raining," Mrs. Drill said, but Georgie put on an old hat and coat, and started off with her hands plunged into her pockets.

Georgie looked up at the grey sky; perhaps it was raining in Ireland too—Edward Bancroft who had spent part of his youth there said it always rained in Ireland—he called it a God-forsaken country; Georgie wondered if it seemed God-forsaken to Nicholas.

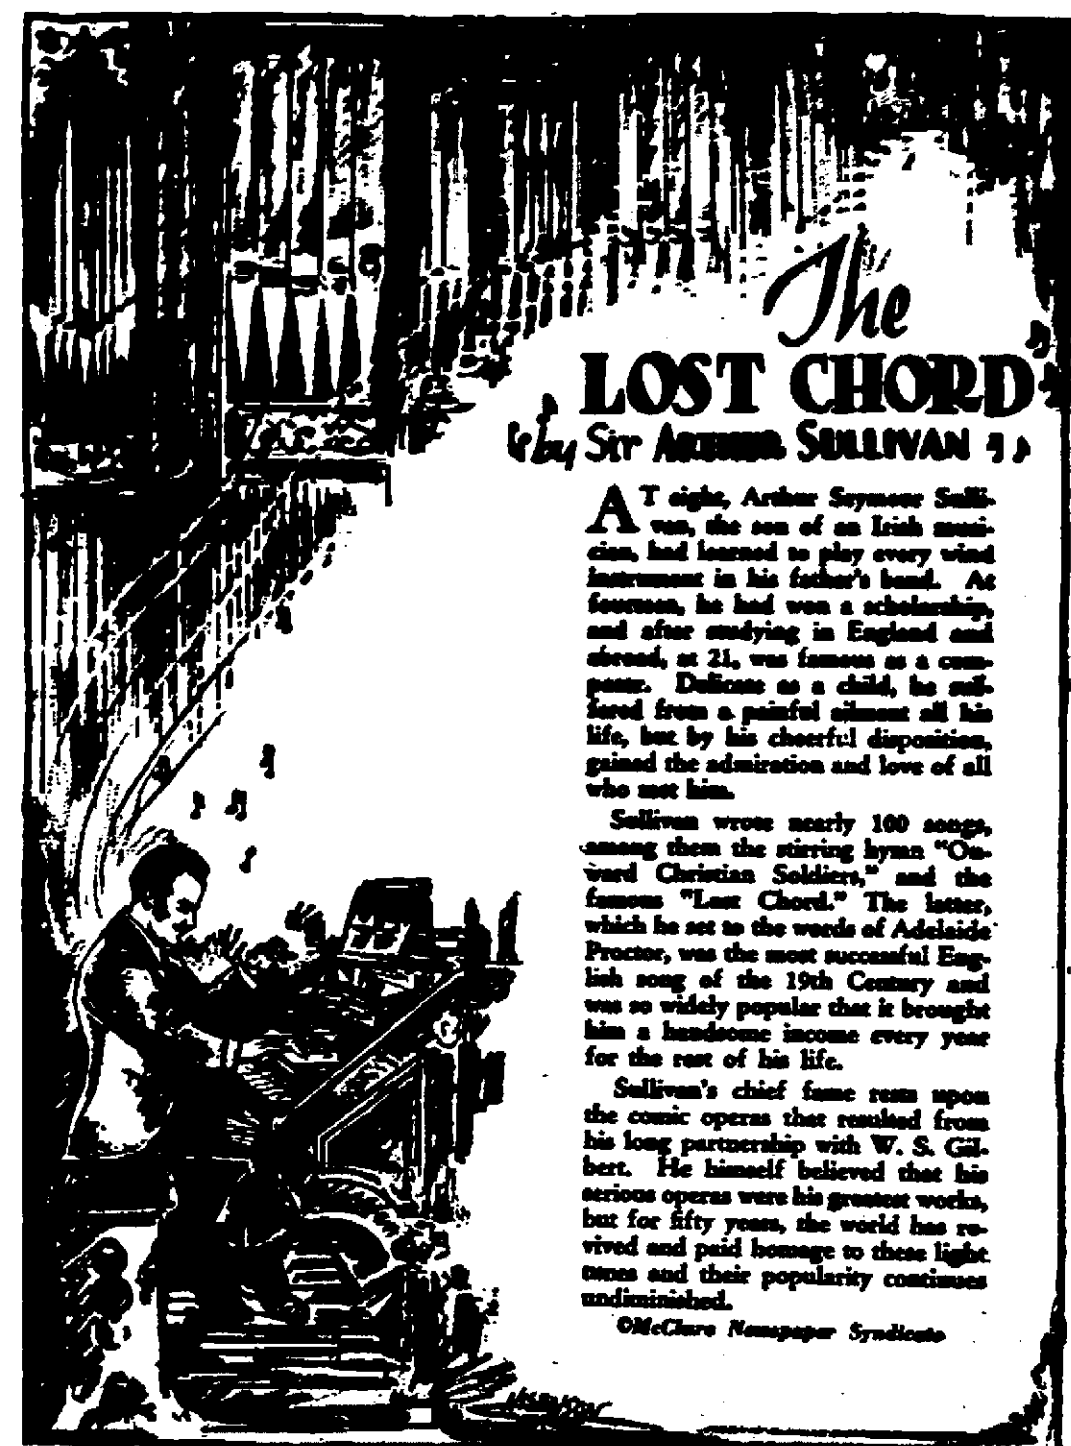

When she reached the post office the bus had gone, and she remembered that the clocks at the Hollies were never right—either too slow or too fast. It was raining more heavily, but she set out to walk the four miles to Redham, it was something to do—a means of passing the long lonely afternoon.

The LOST CHORD

by Sir ARTHUR SULLIVAN

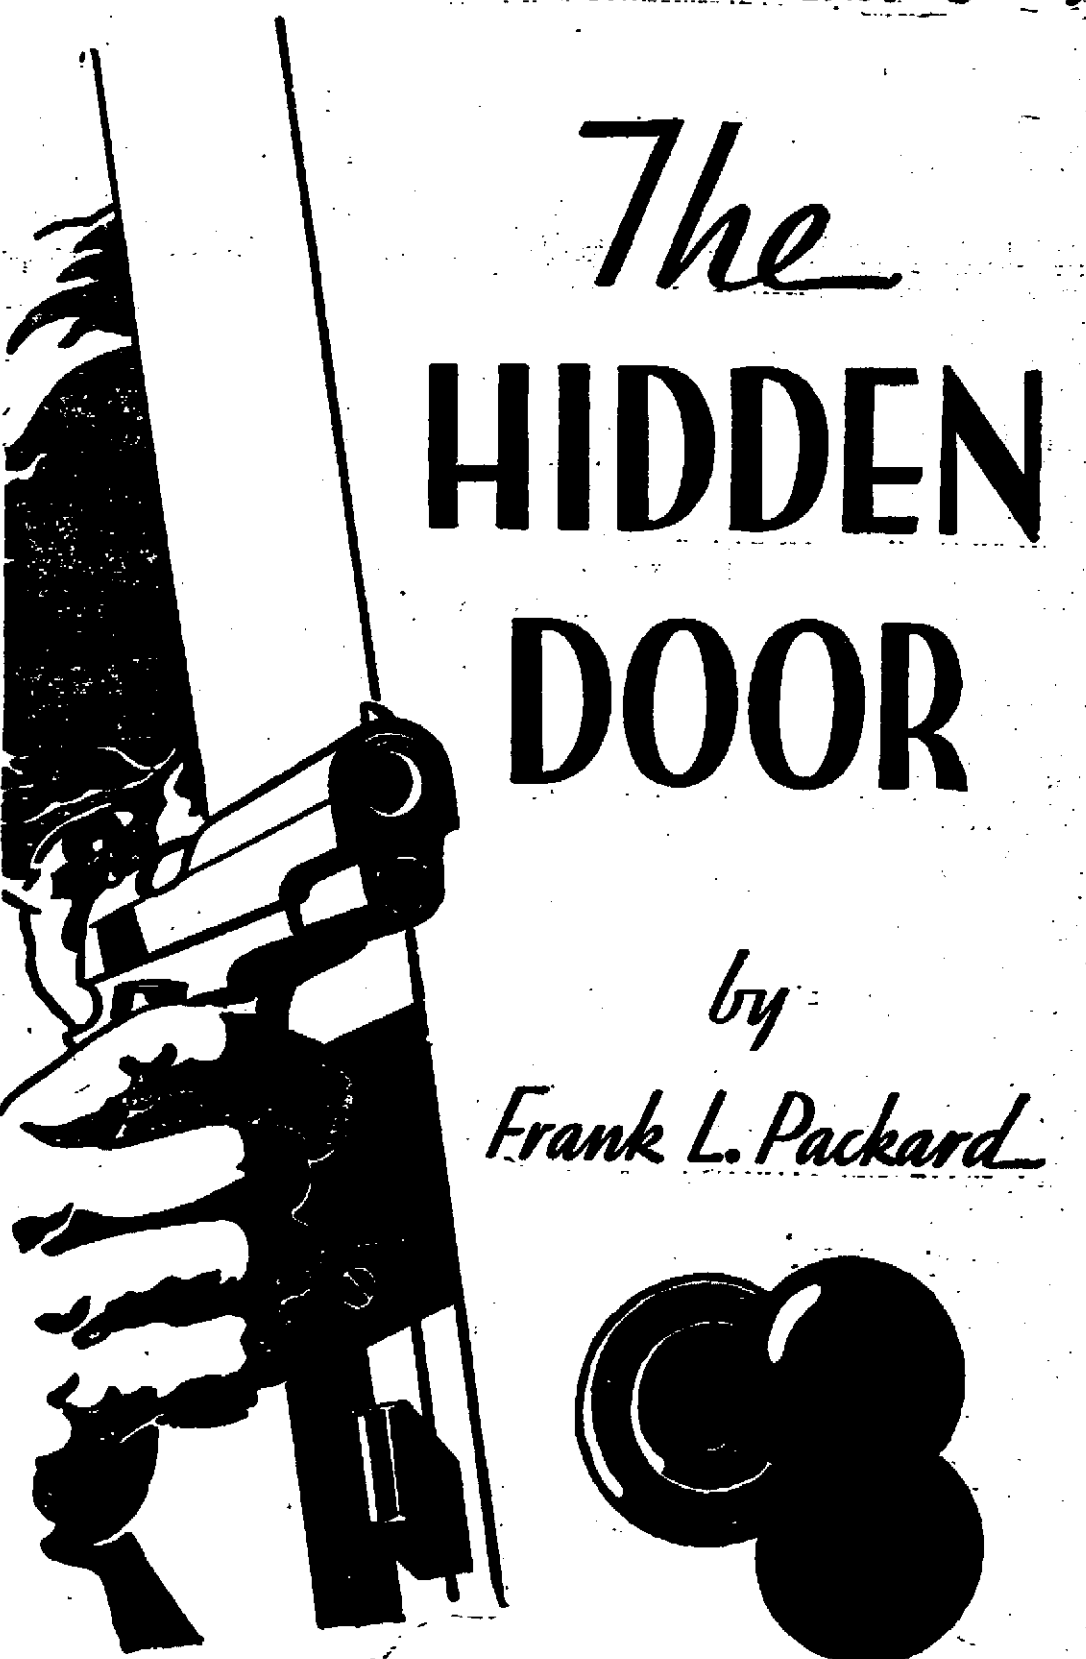

AT eight, Arthur Seymour Sullivan, the son of an Irish musician, had learned to play every wind instrument in his father's band. At fourteen, he had won a scholarship, and after studying in England and abroad, at 21, was famous as a composer. Delicate as a child, he suffered from a painful ailment all his life, but by his cheerful disposition, gained the admiration and love of all who met him.

Sullivan wrote nearly 100 songs, among them the stirring hymn "O God, Christian Soldiers," and the famous "Lost Chord." The latter, which he set to the words of Adelaide Procter, was the most successful English song of the 19th Century and was so widely popular that it brought him a handsome income every year for the rest of his life.

Sullivan's chief fame rests upon the comic operas that resulted from his long partnership with W. S. Gilbert. He himself believed that his serious operas were his greatest work, but for fifty years, the world has revived and paid homage to these light ones and their popularity continues undiminished.

SOAP FOR BOILS

As far back as I can remember the home treatment of boils (furuncles) was to use equal parts of the ordinary brown laundry soap and brown sugar. This was applied to the boil and changed daily until the boil opened itself, or was considered ready to open.

There have been many suggestions during the past few years as to the prevention of boils, or making them disappear in a short time.

Various foods have been recommended, various vitamin foods such as tomatoes, yeast, oranges, bananas, and the avoidance of certain other foods. These suggestions have certainly been helpful in many cases.

Another method is the use of vaccines some of which are made up from the boils or abscesses from the patient himself. These also have been helpful in certain cases.

However, it is interesting to read of the advice of Dr. H. von Baeyer, of Munich, given just a few months ago. He calls attention to the effectiveness of "soap" in suppressing or preventing boils that are just commencing, and in hastening the process in others so that they are soon "pointing," that is ready to discharge their contents themselves, or be opened up by the slight help of the knife.

"A thin disc of soap about the size of the thumb nail is placed over the boil, and held in place by adhesive plaster. Any kind of toilet soap may be used."

Dr. von Baeyer states that itching and the tension from the swelling are relieved in a short time. He believes that the soap opens up the pores of the skin, that has lost some of its lime or calcium. This aids the skin in its reaction toward the inflammation.

It is certainly interesting after all these years, and after the use of the various methods of preventing and healing boils to see the old time method of using soap, still in use in such a celebrated medical city as Munich.

Where there is a history of a number of boils it would be well to make sure that there is regular intestinal movement. The use of lime—the gluconate of lime in five grain doses—once or twice a day may prevent boils.

WORLD BEAUTY IS SUED AS HUSBAND THIEF BY ACTRESS

'Broadway Meets Broadway' in Court Fight; Mother of Bride Is Detective.

New York.—When Broadway Meets Broadway—a portrayal of the clash between two majestic stars of the stage—might well be the title of a gripping divorce drama being enacted now in the New York courts, with two former "Vivian" girls co-starring in leading roles.

Gladys Walton Parfman is featured as the wronged wife, with Dorothy Britton cast as the alien who allegedly stole the love of Clifford R. Parfman.

Usually the story is different. The plot is often woven around a rather commonplace wife, who tries in vain to vie with a dazzling actress whose glamour and fascination blind the eyes of an ardent husband. Not infrequently a Broadway star is named by some discarded wife as the "other woman" in a marital misadventure, but seldom are both females contestants famous as stage beauties.

Suits and Threats to Sue.

Mrs. Parfman, the former Gladys Walton of Earl Carroll fame, is suing her husband, World war aviator and once wealthy real estate operator, for divorce and is threatening to sue Miss Britton for alienation of her husband's affection.

Miss Britton, in addition to her laurels as an actress, once won the highest conceivable beauty title, that of "Miss Universe." At that time some of the judges expressed the opinion she was "the most beautiful girl of all time." She retaliates that she will sue Mrs. Parfman for defamation of character. In addition, Parfman has a $100,000 alienation suit pending against his wife's parents, William and Clara Walton of Chicago.

The Parfman marriage ceremony was performed in an airplane soaring over New Jersey, on August 22, 1929, and seemed at first to be in reality a marriage "made in heaven." According to Mrs. Parfman's complaint, however, things started to happen early in 1931. These disagreements she now attributes to the influence of Miss Britton.

Mrs. Parfman's mother, resenting the intrusion of a new star into her daughter's orbit, set out to dim its luster. In the preliminary court hearings she testified that she perched on a roof and peered into an apartment one moonlit night last April. Of this nocturnal vigil she says:

"It was a little after midnight when through the lighted window we saw Mr. Parfman come into the apartment. A woman in a pink negligee who had been sitting near the window went to meet him and he embraced and kissed her."

She adds that Parfman left the living room, returned shortly after in pajamas and again kissed the girl. At 6 a. m., when she finally abandoned her roof-top chaperonage, Parfman was still in the apartment, Mrs. Walton says.

"Just Friends," Says He.

She also identified the signature of "C. R. Parfman" and "Dorothy B. Harding" inscribed on a Havana hotel register. Parfman offers no denial of the charges, and frankly admits that he has been friendly with Miss Britton, but asserts that he was never more than "just friendly."

Although he testified that he no longer holds his $300-a-week job, he was ordered to pay $300 a week temporary alimony. Meanwhile decision on the divorce plea is pending.

As often happens in spectacularly cast dramas, the audience is hard put to it to decide just which of the feminine participants merits its highest favor. It's a tough spot for a critic, for whichever way the decision goes will mean an insult to the fair name of beauty—one beauty or the other.

Ball Holds Farm Family Prisoners for 6 Hours
Carlisle, Pa.—Chased into their home as a wild bull charged at a departing guest about midnight recently, Newell Wilson, a farmer of Barnitz, his family and guest were held prisoners for six hours until a son-in-law with a shotgun, assisted by neighbors, captured the bull and released the family.

The bull charged at the windows of the house, and the family extinguished all lights and remained in the darkened house until Lawrence Strickler, of Boiling Springs, arrived. Strickler, assisted by five neighbors, cornered the bull and returned him to the barn.

Thugs Hear Anti-Crime Sermon, Then Rob Church
Montgomery, Ala.—Thieves sat among the congregation of Trinity Presbyterian church here recently and listened to the pastor give a sermon in criticism of a wave of crime. As the congregation filed out at the conclusion of services, the thieves apparently remained inside.

When the church was unlocked for evening services, a burglary of the church safe was discovered. Offerings amounting to $300 constituted the loot.

Man Bites His Dog

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
WASHINGTON—When President Roosevelt dispatched that now famous telegram to Alabama respecting the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, it was hailed generally as a daring move.

And it was so regarded, despite the fact that it was not the first time since F.D.R. became President that he has stirred amazement by his bold strokes.

Just how Leon James Farley, McCord, national committeeman from Alabama, came to communicate with Roosevelt on this subject and why the President elected to wire him his reply, has never been revealed. Whether the stage was set ahead of time for this inter-change perhaps only the principals know.

There was a significant thing, however, about the President's telegram to McCord. It was a carefully phrased document. He merely reiterated the stand he has taken since he was nominated. Repeal of the eighteenth amendment is a part of the democratic platform, and "I subscribe to that platform," was his Another Blast statement.

The President has written another message since then, this time to "Big Jim" Farley, postmaster general and dispenser of patronage, which, from a political standpoint, is perhaps more daring than the other.

At a time when "deserving democrats" are clamoring for jobs and democratic politicians are conducting intensive searches for seats of republican job holders to shove out, the President asks for legislation that will remove more than 15,000 postmasters from the political rosters.

He has signed an executive order requiring examinations of all applicants for postmasterships unless they were already qualified or regularly commissioned.

He has requested Farley to draft necessary legislation for submission to congress next year making the change permanent by law.

Which?

The question that interests political observers now is this: Does the administration propose, between now and the time the suggested change becomes law to pack in as many democrats as it can into postmasterships? Or, knowing that where one appointment is made, perhaps half a dozen enemies result, is the administration looking for an easy way of handling this problem?

It is no secret that the average member of congress would gladly sign away his claims to patronage if he could do so with impunity.

So, while at long range this proposed patronage operation might cause the patients to become panicky, after it is once performed, many of them may breathe fervent sighs of relief.

LISBON SQUATTER SECTION REPORT BY UNEMPLOYED

Lisbon (P)—"Liberty Town," which lies within the city bounds of Lisbon and where there are no rents, taxes or police, is to be modernized.

The "best people" live in caves followed out of a hillside and have a door, but most of the inhabitants are content with packing-cases. Knowing to demolish the quarter and scatter the population, the city council has decided to give work to the unemployed by modernizing the place.

Under a new operating policy at Kansas City's general hospital, an executive committee of 10 physicians will hold the voting powers formerly spread among 125 staff members.

"The Willow Tree" At The Maverick

Bearimo, who has presented four successes already this season at the Maverick Theatre, gives the public the greatest production to date in "The Willow Tree" written by Ben-rino and Harrison Rhodes and now presented during the war years at the Cohan and Harris Theatre in New York city. "The Willow Tree" will be given a week, beginning this evening, in an open air theatre especially prepared for it, adjacent to the Maverick Theatre. Played in theatres all over the world, "The Willow Tree" has had a success few plays achieve. This is largely due to the excellence of the conception.

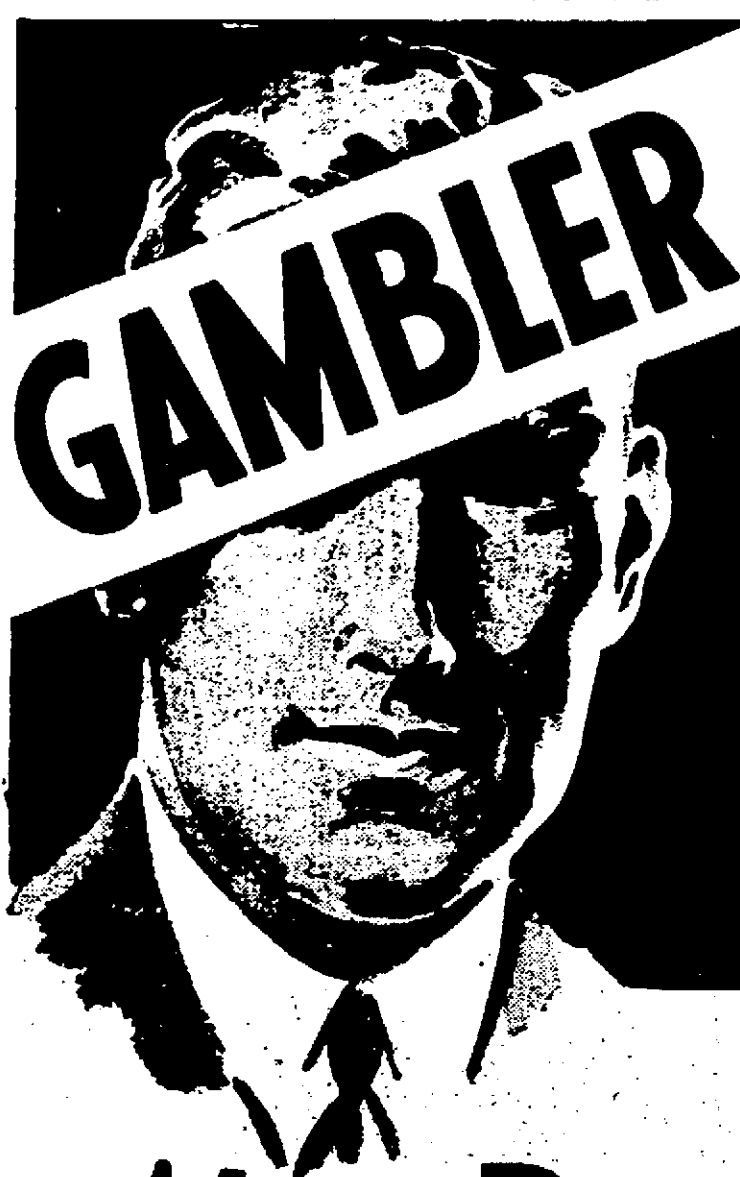

but it is also due to Bearimo's direction, to his knowledge of the theatre, and to his ability in schooling players in their roles.

In keeping with his policy of presenting new players week after week to the Maverick Theatre, Bearimo offers (for her first appearance with this group) Miss Mary C. Lange in the role of the Image whom Edward Hamilton (Richard Bonnerville) brings to life. Carroll Ash-born, whose work with the Maverick group has earned the highest praise, will be the wood carver, Tomotada, who tells the legend to Hamilton and, incidentally, sells him the Image. The part of Mary Temple, Hamilton's sweetheart, will be played by Marcelle Swanson, and that of Kimura by Wells Richardson. Others in the large cast assembled for this production are Robert Elwyn, Nicholas Harlow, Donald McHenry, Frances von Bernuth, Stephen Sandoe, George A. Spaggiari, and Harriett Marshall. Bearimo has not only supervised the production but also has designed the costumes. A quartet with Finnish music.

JAPANESE BUSINESS LAGS IN BRAZILIAN TRADE RACE

Rio De Janeiro (P)—Despite a steady Japanese drive for trade in Brazil, Japanese exporters have failed to capture much of a hold in this country. Imports from Japan in 1932 were only about $350,000, and for the first quarter of 1933 in proportion. The Japanese have tried to make headway in almost every branch of Brazilian imports, the chief supplies now being porcelain and earthenware.

THE WALKING CORK

GIVE THE CORK A LITTLE START AND IT WILL WALK DOWN THE SLOPING RULER.

Stick two heavy pins into the bottom of a cork and let the pins protrude about an inch beneath the cork. Then stick two knives into opposite sides of the cork and let them hang at an angle, so the whole thing is in a V shape. Now place a ruler on top and between two glasses or other tall objects, but have one a little higher than the other, so the ruler slopes slightly. Stand the cork with the knives attached on the top of this incline with the pins centered so the cork will be balanced. Then give the cork a slight push, withdraw your hands and the cork will walk with its burden down the sloping ruler.

LIVE BUSINESS MEN ADVERTISE IN THE FREEMAN

Farmers Tend Toward "Left" in Scandinavia

By HENRY W. FETTERSON
Stockholm (AP)—Married by low prices, overvalued exports, and increased taxes, the Scandinavian farmer is showing a decided tendency to swing to the left in politics. In both Sweden and Denmark the offer of the left has caused intense political alliance with the social-democratic parties.

The Danish farmer was the first to shed his conservative coat. Turn toward Socialism. With the conservatives he had ruled the senate, while the radicals and social-democrats controlled the chamber. In the interests of an agricultural relief program, however—a project involving depreciation of the Danish crown and state credits—the farmer forgot past enmities and worked with the socialists. The Swedish farmers' party recently followed suit, agreeing to support the social-democrats' unemployment relief program in exchange for a tax on oleomargarine and definite measures toward raising prices on milk, butter, meat, and vegetables. In Norway the farmer likewise has proved himself politically alert, gaining control of the last previous government and engineering a campaign to raise the prices of milk and meat. Accorded something new. The cooperation of farmer and social-democrat presents a new phase in Swedish political history. The program of the social-democrats, including free trade policies, disarmament, and at one time, socialization of land, has had little support in agricultural circles. In the circles the farmer members traditionally have voted with the conservatives. The press in general is inclined to doubt that the new alliance will be lasting. But should the tendency to work together continue, it is agreed that the Swedish left wing will be definitely strengthened. WITTENBERG. Wittenberg, July 20.—The W. W. Society of the Wittenberg M. E. Church will hold its annual fair on July 26, afternoon and evening. Supper will be served at 5 o'clock, consisting of vegetable salad, cabbage salad, chicken salad, cold Virginia ham, blarney, hot coffee, feed tea, pickles, cake and jelly. There will be a fancy booth of lovely hand-made articles and a refreshment booth with homemade ice cream, watermelon, fruit punch and home-made candy. All are invited to come and enjoy the affair. The price for supper will be a free donation. The Missionary Society held its July meeting at the home of Miss Rachel Shultz, the president, on Wednesday afternoon. All enjoyed the interesting meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Lay and family of Lynbrook are stopping for a week at the Lowden cottage. The Epworth League will hold a food sale at the Wittenberg store on Saturday evening of this week. Mrs. Luther Shultz and Mr. and Mrs. Cornelia of Kingston called on Mrs. Edward Colwell of Alabon on Sunday. The Misses Alice and Crystal Shultz spent Thursday with Mrs. Edwin Angeline. Mrs. Florence Roberts of East Rockaway is spending a couple of weeks at her cottage in this place. Mrs. Marshall Angeline and children visited Mrs. Hill of Elm Mountain Tuesday. Victor Shultz and Aaron Van De Bogart, Jr., took a trip to Coopers on Sunday. TURNISH RED GROUP USES OLD DERVISH MONASTERY. Istanbul (AP)—Gypsies and an abandoned derwish monastery figure in Communism's latest intrigue into Turkey, as reported by the vigilant Istanbul police. A hundred Communists, including four Turkish women, were arrested within a month. Five of them recently returned from visits to Russia. The group was found to be using an abandoned derwish monastery as a clandestine publishing house. They also were found to be employing Turkish gypsy vendors to distribute their Communist tracts, hidden under baskets of candied fruit, lavender, and similar street merchandise. The leader of the group is believed to be Dr. Shervia Kharin Bay, a Turk who resides in Germany and whose mother was one of those arrested here. The first higher-than-air craft to be based at Moffet Field, near San Francisco, was a 220-foot long monoplane.

BOY, 7 YEARS OLD, RESCUES BROTHER FROM ANGRY BEAR

Performs the Manlike Feat of Wrestling Animal in Single-handed Combat.

Easton, Mass.—Little John Serles, 7 years old, rescued his brother, Anthony, from an angry bear at Franklin Park, near Boston, today. The boy, who is a member of the Franklin Park Club, was playing with his brother when the bear attacked them. John, who is a brave and resourceful boy, fought the bear single-handed and rescued his brother.

When a bear at the park saw a small boy and his brother, it charged at them. The boy, who is a member of the Franklin Park Club, was playing with his brother when the bear attacked them. John, who is a brave and resourceful boy, fought the bear single-handed and rescued his brother.

Injured by Bear's Claws.

With a surprised howl the bear retreated. Anthony was carried from the cage by an attendant and taken to the city hospital and John emerged by himself unscathed. Anthony is recovering from having his right leg and thigh and right arm ripped by the bear's claws.

John was still at Franklin Park long after the accident. Though he was injured, he was not afraid. He was the first to face his parents at home and explain why he had been playing with the bear. After a little urging he told his story.

Here's His Story.

"We had some apples we wanted to feed the bears," he said. "We climbed over the first fence (eight feet high) and got right up in front of the cage. Tony was feeding this bear an apple when all of a sudden—zip, she reached out a claw and grabbed him. She pulled him right into the cage. He started to yell and cry and I started to holler. I ran around looking for something and I found a piece of iron. I grabbed it and squeezed into the cage. The bear had Tony down and was clawing him, so I hit her.

"She backed up and just then the keeper came along and gave her the dickens. He helped Tony out and I got out myself. Gee! I was scared for Tony."

"Lillian" is a Russian brown bear which has been at Franklin Park since the den was built about eighteen years ago.

Caveman Quits Life of Hermit; Finds New Woo

Paris.—France's cave man has surrendered. For three years Eugene Masson lived on rabbits and stealthily borrowed cabbages. His only expense was for matches, and from time to time his bedraggled figure would slink into a small nearby town after dark. Starting out in 1929 with a capital of 85 centimes, his fortune dwindled with every one of these reckless excursions to pay his tithe to Ivar Kreuger.

A few weeks ago he had 10 centimes left. Ten centimes, he told police, but not one friend. Overcome by love of his fellow men, yearning for the blaze of a hearth, he abandoned forever his shelter of twigs in the depths of Fontainebleau forest, threw away his rabbit traps and his last box of matches and surrendered.

"Three years ago I set fire to a chateau," he told the gendarmes. "It was accidental, but I couldn't prove that. So—"

"How true," mused the corporal, setting fire to a cigarette. "But be at ease; you shall have plenty of company now. It will be a combination of the retirement to which you have become accustomed and the coquetry you have missed. I am happy to be able to help you. Fortunately, you see, the state holds the following appropriation of the public domain, building without authorization, construction of a dwelling without submitting plans for approval, borrowing state-owned live stock and privately owned vegetables without permission, failure to declare earnings and evasion of the income tax."

Farmer Hiccoughed Once a Minute for 7 Years

Allendale, S. C.—George Saxon, a forty-five-year-old farmer here, says he has been hiccoughing for seven years, and thinks he has set an endurance record. Up to this time medical treatment has brought no relief. He hiccoughs on an average of one a minute.

Doctors say they could cure him if Mr. Saxon would consent to a diaphragm operation, but he would rather hiccough than submit to the operation. He has learned to sleep in spite of the hiccoughs, and he holds his nose when eating or drinking, in order to avoid choking. He has been too weak to work for two years.

Most Powerful Gasoline ever sold at regular gas price

Highest Anti-Knock Gasoline ever sold at regular gas price

TODAY, American business is responding to the call for new codes... to hasten the return of prosperity.

Today, TYDOL is ready with its code... A code already endorsed by millions of satisfied motorists for the increased gasoline values it has brought them.

They have found in Triple "X" TYDOL a gasoline whose honest performance meets every claim made for it.

Yet, we do not ask you to accept Triple "X" TYDOL on our statements, but rather you should judge it solely on its action in your motor. Duplicate, if you can, in any single gasoline, its extra power, its extra anti-knock and its extra lubrication service.

Today

Kingston: "When Ladies Meet."

Robert Montgomery, Ann Harding, Frank Morgan, Myrna Loy and Alice Brady are to be seen in sparkling and perfectly done comedy drama that hits a new high in screen entertainment. It's the eternal triangle again, with Frank Morgan especially good in the role of the excitement seeking publisher who falls for a modern young author, played by Myrna Loy. Her lover, Robert Montgomery, knows all about the affair, and as a last resort he brings the publisher's wife into the affair. From then on, with some of the finest acting of the year, the show moves on to the intensely dramatic conclusion. The plot is the negligible part of this picture, it is the acting and flawless dialogue that makes it the success it is. Excitement and glamour are lacking, but so human and understanding is this talkie, so finely done and flawless in its character portrayal, that it is most assuredly placed on the don't miss list of current films.

Orpheum: "So This is Africa."

"Self Defense," Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey put on an African picture seemingly for the purpose of ending all future "mellodramas" of the dark continent. In a subtle way, the hokum that burdened many of the African talkie efforts is taken for a gentle and humorous ride in the best Wheeler-Woolsey manner. There are some real laughs in this show, and Raquel Torres proves a lovely heroine. "Self Defense" offers Claire Windsor, Pauline Frederick and Theodore Von Eltz in a story of tangled lives and destinies.

Broadway: "Hello Everybody" and "Kiss Before the Mirror." Kate Smith, who vocalized her way to fame and fortune in the microphone, is the star of this homey tale that gives the radio artist many opportunities to burst into song. There is no denying that Miss Smith has an appealing voice, but Randolph Scott and Sally Blane handle most of the acting assignment. "The Kiss Before the Mirror" is the story of a husband who kills his faithless wife, and his actions almost persuade another man to do the same thing. Paul Lukas, Nancy Carroll and Frank Morgan are the principal artists participating in this rather gruesome drama.

Tomorrow:

Kingston: "Private Detective 62."

William Powell has somewhere in his excellent cinema career been given a better story than this, but at that, the show moves along at a fairly brisk pace, and the star makes the most of his opportunities in a role that is lost in a somewhat dusty plot. This time, Mr. Powell is let out of the diplomatic service, and after searching about for a new position, he finally ends up in a crooked detective agency where he becomes a private detective whose noble task it is to frame innocent women. He goes along fine until he is asked to frame Margaret Lindsay, but instead of that he falls in love with her, and the story ends up by his proving what a dirty bunch of rotters the detective agency really is.

Orpheum: Same.

Broadway: "Hell to Heaven."

Carole Lombard and Jack Oakie are the principal players to cover the wide divergence of space called for in the title of this picture, and what's more, they make a neat job of it. For thrilling drama, this show rates among the best, as it discloses the gamble eleven people take in an effort to overcome their present difficulties.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD.—The way to stay married in Hollywood, some say, is for the actor to marry a non-professional.

According to others, the way to stay married in Reno's suburb of Filmland is for the actor to marry into the profession.

On October 20, 1931, Richard Dix, star, married Winifred Coe, non-professional.

On June 26, 1931, William Powell, star, married Carole Lombard, also rated a star.

Then The Crash

On the same day, in July, 1933, news broke that both matrimonial flirts have gone into a nosedive. Dix admits a separation. Miss Lombard has taken residence in Reno—where, of course, there is always the possibility that she will change her mind before taking action.

The Powell-Lombard rift was the surprise of the two. Rumor had had the Dixes getting along badly since last winter.

Inspection of recent marital "casualties" in Hollywood reveals that marriages between professionals have hit the earth a little more resoundingly than the other kind.

The Pickford-Fairbanks estrangement came after 13 years of seemingly successful pursuit of careers and domesticity at the same time.

Most Gibson and Sally Eilers separated after seeking conciliation before; Adolphe Menjou and Kathryn Carver broke, although Miss Carver gave up her career; Lola Lane did the same and still she and Lew Ayres parted; Joan Crawford and Doug, Jr., shared spotlights and their marriage failed.

But Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, both acting, seem serenely domestic, among other movie couples like Fredric March and Florence Elbridge, Frank Fay and Barbara Stanwyck, and Stuart Erwin and June Collyer.

Happy Outsiders

Married outside the acting profession and still married, are Harold Lloyd (Mildred Davis, retired from the screen), Richard Arlen (so did Jobyna Ralston), Robert Montgomery, Robert Young, Irene Dunne, Dolores Del Rio, Aline MacMahon, Edward G. Robinson, Joan and Constance Bennett, Preston Foster, Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, James Cagney, Neil Hamilton, Joe E. Brown, Warren William and many others.

Erosion's Effect

The menace of land depreciation by erosion has never been adequately understood. Our original wealth in soil resources has served to prevent any general realization of the fact that all land is not permanently fixed in the fields. Unrestrained soil erosion is rapidly building a new empire of worn-out land in America—land stripped of its rich surface layer down to poor subsoil, and land gullied beyond the possibility of practical reclamation.

ORGANDIE FAVORED FOR SUMMER WEAR

Suits Are Cool, Crisp, Smart for Hot Days.

The new organdie suits have arrived. They are so smart as you might think. And are extremely new. They are in dark colors usually—navy, brown or even black—either plain or all-over embroidered fabrics, and they're worn with white or pastel organdie blouses with a crisp ruffle or ruche around the neck. Most fetching. Most of them have loose three-quarter mending coats and slim gored skirts.

They're cool and crisp and smart for midsummer wear. A nice combination is a suit of navy blue organdie—skirt and three quarter coat—and a blouse of shell pink organdie. Your hat may be navy organdie, too, if you like. Or if you don't want to match everything up too completely, the good old white Panama is always safe and smart.

Organdie for evening is, of course, a summer classic. If you like your gown white, then have your jacket of black organdie or red, or some of the fresh, clear pastels. If you lean toward the new dark tones, make the jacket white or light, but make it organdie. And be sure it has layers of petal-like wings at the shoulders to give you that important "sway" look.

SATIN TRIMS PRINT

By CHERRY NICHOLAS

An important message from style headquarters is the renewed interest which is being shown in satin. The vogue reflects not only in the black satin jacket suits and one-piece dresses which the smart set is wearing about town at present, but satin as a trimming on print or plain crepe frocks is a highlighted fashion. The black and white summertime print frock in sheer crepe of bengberg here pictured has a white satin bow at the neck and at the waist. The brief matching jacket which this fashionably gowned young woman is carrying has wide satin cuffs. Lyolene designs this practical wrap-around model for afternoon wear. The beauty about these handsome bengberg crepes is that while they look expensive they are not expensive, and what's more they tub perfectly.

FLASHES FROM PARIS

Newest prints take on reddish tones.

The "dara" turban in black and white is new.

Metal berthas register among newest items in costume jewelry.

Sheathlike skirts with a flounce at the hemline is newest silhouette.

Huge buttons, novelty belts and unusual clips provide smart trims.

Black and white jewelry appears to wear with black and white ensembles.

Mitts of black transparent velvet are displayed in the new Patou collection.

Fashion Does Not Take Kindly to Mannish Shoes

Shoes, we learn from the expert bottlers in Paris, have decided very definitely against going mannish. With one voice they chorus, "We are going to keep the feminine foot feminine—no heavy masculine looking shoes for our shops." And for the strictly tailored suit—which, if they do not exactly approve of, they tolerate—a pinstatched Midskin oxford is advocated. An alternate choice is another oxford, but perforated instead of pinstatched. Of course, in either case, the pocket-book can be had to match, and on special order you can get a belt and gloves.

Fabric Gloves Chic

Don't be afraid of the new fabric gloves. Striped cotton ones may match your waistcoat, your scarf or your hat.

The Dutch Boy Skin, Skates and Swims

New York—When it comes to sports, either winter or summer, there is something about the rosy cheeked little Dutch boy that appeals to women, and let me tell you what it is—it's his trousers. The Dutch Boy silhouette has met with rounds of applause on this at St. Moritz, also, hereabouts on skates, but it is on the beach that it really has been most approved. One New York shop has made a feature of this type of beach pajama, and it has certainly started something.

Comparatively new though one might think pajamas were, as compared to other things women wear, they are such an old story that it is necessary to introduce new ideas all the time in order to keep them in the foreground.

This is the month of months for vacation togs, and most certainly no kit is complete without pajamas for one purpose or another.

Perhaps you belong to the "I'll stick to my horse, Graham," fraternity—in which case you may be planning a Dude Ranch vacation. The shops are ready for you, with the best looking outfits for roughing it. In most of them there is something plaid, usually a shirt or jacket. Suede jackets seem part of the rancher's equipment, too. Corduroy breeches are, of course, included, and jeans seem to be a must.

You will want a sombrero, about a five-gallon one, and you will want, in order to be thoroughly at home in the saddle, a leather bolero, worn over a plaid gingham shirt or something a bit wild and woolly.

The newest cowboy jackets are bright hued. Just between ourselves, there is not much danger of your being taken for anything but a tenderfoot if you dress according to even the best sports shops.

Vera Eorea showed Dutch boy pajamas in her last opening and illustrated above is a model in gingham. The cut of the trouser leg and the way it is caught in at the ankle are responsible for the name, Dutch Boy pajamas. In navy with white buttons.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

For immediate wear milliners are using cre and slipper satin and taffeta in small shapes and capelines.

In addition, there are black lines faced with a light color or white, boxed-stitched satin, and all-over embroidered organdie.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Youthful Evening or Dance Frock. 7886. Here is a pretty model that is especially suited to slight girlish figures. The waist extends to the hips, with deep points at the centre front and back. The skirt meets the waist in the narrow yoke extensions of its panels, and is lengthened at the sides by slightly flared sections. The dress is sleeveless, and is cut with a youthful neck, outlined by a double berthas gracefully undulated. White taffeta was chosen for this model. One could use crepe in any of its pretty weaves. Printed silk is suggested and the new evening cottons are also nice.

Designed in 5 sizes: 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19, with corresponding bust measure 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37. Size 13 will require 4 1/4 yards of 35 inch material. To finish with bias binding at berthas, neck and armeye edges will require 4 1/4 yards 1 1/4 inch wide.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Byrne Tells Nation's Wonders To Kiwanis

William Byrne Describes 10,000-Mile Trip to West Coast and Visit to Canadian Rockies As Part of Tour in Connection with Kiwanis Convention.

A graphic picture of the natural splendors of the United States and Canada was portrayed to members of the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel Thursday noon, when William Byrne related episodes of his recent journey to Los Angeles, Calif., to attend the international convention of Kiwanis. Mr. and Mrs. Byrne covered about 10,000 miles during the trip, 1,500 of which was by motor bus.

It was reported that a splendid time was enjoyed at the outing at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Glenelg. Plans are being made for a similar affair for all service clubs in Ulster and Greene counties, to be held at the Boy Scout camp at Cairo on Friday, July 28. Two guests were present, V. E. Cramer of Catskill and Robert Alenson of East Orange, N. J. Music for the day was in charge of Paul Zucca, accompanied at the piano by Danny Blitner.

Pearl Carey, chairman of the program committee, introduced his brother Kiwanian, Mr. Byrne. The Byrnes left Kingston on June 16, and arrived in Chicago the following day, where buses met them and they with other Kiwanians on the same trip, attended the World's Fair. The next day and night were spent on the train, and on the third morning the group arrived at Denver, where a bus trip through the mountains, a visit to Bill Cody's grave, and a sight seeing trip occupied their attention. Traveling to Salt Lake City, where they arrived the next day, the tour went by way of the beautiful Royal Gorge. The cleanliness of the Mormon city and the wonders of Great Salt Lake made the Byrnes stay in Utah a pleasant one. The Grand Canyon was the next point of interest, and trips along the rim, lectures on the rock formations and other events of considerable interest held the tour's attention. They arrived at Los Angeles on Sunday morning, and the New York state delegation immediately organized and made themselves known with a few songs and hilarity. Four days were spent in the city of the angels, with a side trip to Santa Barbara, described by the speaker as "the place where I should like to live."

From Los Angeles the Byrnes went to San Francisco, where the speaker met his brother, whom he had not seen in a number of years. A visit to Eureka Kiwanians, the Red Wood Forest and surrounding country followed, and then the tour headed for Portland, Ore. From Portland a visit was paid Seattle, Wash., and then Vancouver, Alberta, Canada. The tour stopped overnight at Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies, and then Banff, both resorts of international reputation. Winnipeg was the next stop, and the long ride back to Albany completed the journey.

Mr. Byrne's description of the beauties of the country and the hospitality everywhere, impressed his fellow members, many declaring that they would like to take such a journey.

World's Greatest Herring Port

Yarmouth is the greatest herring port in the world. It became known as a great holiday resort, through Charles Dickens' discovery of the town, and the publicity he gave it in "David Copperfield."

WALKILL VALLEY BOY SCOUT COURT OF HONOR

New Paltz, July 21.—Robert DeBols was several honorees at the second meeting of the Walkill Valley Court of Honor held in the high school last week. He received three merit badges and was presented by David Jewett with his Star Scout badge, signifying that he is a possessor of five merit badges. Hubert has also received a martiner's compass as a reward for the greatest advancement since September. Mr. MarBarr donated the compass, which is enclosed in a small mahogany box, works in oil and it is so fastened that whatever way the box is tilted the compass remains level. Scout Robert Sullivan received his First Class badge by the Rev. Gerret Wullschlaeger after taking the oath.

Chief Executive Wright presented to six Scouts from the Gardiner Troop their Second Class badges after taking the oath. Mr. Wright also presented to Scout Francis Hasbrouck and two Scouts from Gardiner their Tenderfoot badges after taking the oath. The merit awards were presented by Benjamin H. Matteson as follows: Fellowship—Scouts Forest Hasbrouck and Robert Darbee, Forestry—Scouts Hubert DuBois and Benjamin Matteson, Hiking—Scout Hubert DuBois, Personal Health—Scouts Hubert DuBois, Robert Mauterstock and Robert Sullivan, Reading—Scout Robert Sullivan, Cycling—Scout Benjamin Matteson, Jr. Chief Wright gave a talk about camp life which was very interesting. The next Court of Honor will meet in October.

Paris Parliament Clings To Powers

Daladier Bill For Free Hand On Tariff Dies In Committee

Paris (AP)—The French parliament has just seen what looked to some apprehensive politicians as the approach of centralized executive power, and has slammed the door against it.
It killed in committee a bill which would have given the cabinet full power to impose, raise or lower tariffs.

Daladier Denies Charge.

Objection to the measure, which was introduced on behalf of Premier Edouard Daladier, was expressed in the argument that the bill might lead to increasing assumption of legislative power by the executive branch, making an opening for a possible future dictator.

As a consequence Daladier gave formal assurance that he seeks none of parliament's authority. But he also warned the law-makers that he would call them from vacation early in October, much sooner than they had expected.

Nevertheless the federation of miners' unions in the coal fields of northern France, adopted a resolution promising to defend themselves by all means, including a general strike against "attempts of Fascist organizations developing in France."

Tardieu Advocates Decrees.

What agitation there is in France for a stronger executive authority, armed with decree laws, comes from the right republicans of ex-Premier Andre Tardieu. He is a brisk, assertive politician of the successful
American business executive type.
The creed of the group has been expressed by his lieutenant, Paul Reynaud.

The French parliament squelched a proposal to give the government of Premier Edouard Daladier (center) powers to impose, raise or lower tariffs. Advocates of greater executive power in the big European re- public are Andre Tardieu (right), former premier, and his lieutenant, Paul Reynaud.

"I believe it is necessary to modify the constitution," he said. "Having borrowed the English parliamentary machine, we were wrong in doing away with the brake. The right to dissolve parliament should belong solely to the chief of state."
Opponents of the Tardieu bloc argue that social conditions in France do not permit the establishment of a dictatorial regime. Said one spokesman:

"The great middle class of France
lacks an equivalent in Germany, where it is ruined, and it Italy, where it never existed. It constitutes a society animated by the "little bourgeois" spirit—individualistic, possessive and resistant to collective discipline."

REDDY FOX TURNS UP HIS NOSE

NOW Peter Rabbit prides himself on his ears. To be exact,
I suppose I should say that he prides himself on his hearing. When Short-Tail the Shrew said that he heard footsteps, and promptly disappeared, Peter at once listened. It was a good minute before he heard just the faintest of rustling sounds among the leaves. Very likely he would not have heard them then had he not been listening.

"Short-Tail certainly has got good ears," thought Peter as he ducked down and crouched very low under the thick branch of a little hemlock tree.

He had caught just a glimpse of something red. His heart was in his mouth in an instant. No wonder Short-Tail had disappeared in a hurry! Those footsteps were the footsteps of Reddy
Fox! Peter did some quick thinking.
Should he run? If he did he would give himself away. Reddy would see him and then it would be a race for his life.

Peter decided that the wisest thing was to sit tight just where he was.
Reddy didn't know he was about and wouldn't be looking for him over there.
He hadn't been moving about for some time, so perhaps Reddy would not find his scent. Decidedly the wisest thing was to sit tight.

Peeping out beneath the hemlock branch Peter watched Reddy Fox come nearer and he knew by Reddy's movements that he was hunting mice. This gave Peter a little easier feeling. Reddy was walking very carefully. His sharp ears were cocked forward ready to catch the faintest rustle of a leaf.

With his sharp nose to the ground he ran this way and that way, back and forth, sniffing under every old log, pulling apart every pile of leaves.

Presently he came to one of Short-Tail's little paths. Reddy sniffed in it eagerly. Then such a look of disgust passed over Reddy's face that Peter wanted to laugh. Reddy turned up his nose and left that little path.
A leaf rustled very faintly some distance away. In an instant Reddy turned in that direction, ran lightly a few steps and then with a quick long jump landed with his black paws on a little bunch of leaves. Peter couldn't be sure but he thought he heard a faint squeak.

At once Reddy made the leaves fly.
Then he sniffed among them and once more Peter saw him turn up his nose and that look of disgust went across his face. Abruptly he turned and trotted away. It was clear that he didn't intend to hunt there any longer. Peter was puzzled. When it was safe to do so he crept from his hiding place and went over to the spot where Reddy had pounced on the little bunch of leaves, and scattered them.

At first Peter didn't see anything but the scattered leaves. He was still wondering what caused Reddy to leave in such disgust when he noticed a little round hole in the ground. Curiously Peter sniffed at it. In an instant he understood. He remembered what Short-Tail the Shrew had said about that musky scent he carried and how most of his enemies disliked it.
Peter could smell it now. This was an entrance to one of Short-Tail's tunnels. The leaves had hidden it until Reddy had scattered them. Probably he had heard Short-Tail there, and thinking it was a mouse he had sprung in the hope of catching Mr. Mouse.

Short-Tail had ducked down in his tunnel and then Reddy had got that musky smell. That was why he had turned up his nose and gone elsewhere to hunt.

"I don't blame him much," muttered
Peter, turning up his own wabby little nose. Then he grew thoughtful.
"Old Mother Nature certainly does have funny ways of protecting her children. Even a bad smell is useful at times," said he.

More Young Persons Wed, According to Committee

The proportion of married people in the United States has constantly increased in the last 40 years.

The proportion of bachelors chiefly affects those under thirty-five, and is especially marked at the ages most important from the standpoint of fertility—from twenty to twenty-nine years of age.

The sexes have followed the same trend up to thirty-five years, but among men the proportion married between thirty-five and forty-four has remained practically stationary since 1890.
Above forty-five there has been a net decline in the proportion of men married at each age, although the decline has not been steady in all cases.

Among women, on the other hand, the proportion married has continued to rise at all ages up to sixty-five.

From there on there has been a slight falling off.

There are outstanding discoveries of a subcommittee of a national research committee on social trends.

LEARNING FROM EACH OTHER

English Lecturer Sees Much Benefit in Travel for Persons in Business.

"If America could, only send 100,000 young men to Europe every year so that they might absorb some of the British poise and courtesy, and we could send some 100,000 young men across the Atlantic where they could imbibe the vitality and enthusiasm of

Thus Mr. H. Gordon Selfridge in an illuminating address to a large audience, mainly composed of his own employees, who filled the large hall of the Regent Street Polytechnic.

They were assembled to hear a lecture by Mr. Bent on "American Department Stores," and Mr. Selfridge, who presided, seized the opportunity to point the moral of the value of travel to business men and women.

All nations, he said, had something to learn from one another. America had much to learn from this country, and that was recognized by the merchants of the great cities. Thousands of people interested in dry goods come to Europe every year to study our methods and those of the continent, and it was probably this everlasting travel that made our friends on the other side excel in their own departments.

And we in England had much to learn. There was nothing more valuable to those engaged in business than travel—even little excursions to Paris and the other capitals of Europe—because they were able to see

Anti-Kidnap Drive Producing Results

(By The Associated Press.)

A concerted anti-kidnaping drive is producing results in various sections of the country, officials claimed today.

Captain Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the Cook county state's attorney's office in Chicago, asserted that he had reliable information that three or four members of the gang of Roger Tuohy of Chicago arrested in Elkhorn, Wis., were involved in the recent abduction of John Factor, the speculator.

The police at Elkhorn said the prisoners were identified as Tuohy, Willie Sharkey, "Gloomy Gus" Schaeffer and Ed McFadden. They added that Schaeffer had $1,200 in $10 bills in his possession. Reports at the time Factor was released were that his ransom, reputed to be from $50,000 to $200,000, was paid in $10 and $20 bills.

The suspects were returned to Chicago, where they are to be questioned about Factor's abduction as well as about the kidnaping of William Hamm, Jr., wealthy St. Paul brewer.

At the same time progress was claimed by officials in their investigation of the abduction and subsequent release of August Luer, Alton, Ill., banker, with the announcement that one of five suspects—Percy Michael Fitzgerald—had confessed participation in the crime. Mayors of fifteen municipalities near Alton met to formulate plans to rid their localities of undesirable persons.

Almost simultaneously with these developments came an announcement from Senator Louis Murphy of Iowa that the federal government was investigating all forms of major racketeering, and especially kidnaping, with the idea of strengthening laws to cope with the situation. Two other members of a Senate subcommittee are engaged in investigations in Michigan and New York. They are Senators Vandenberg of Michigan and Copeland of New York.

System of Impeachment

Originated in England

The system of impeachment embodied in the federal Constitution was copied from that developed in England over a period of four centuries. The earliest recorded impeachments by the house of lords were those of Lord Latimer in 1376 and the Earl of Suffolk in 1398. All subjects of the king were made amenable to impeachment in parliament, irrespective of whether or not they held public office. Under the American system the process applies only to officials. In England notables were impeached for crimes of any degree, but commoners could be impeached only for offenses not punishable by death. Upon conviction the house of lords imposed any penalty it chose. The process of impeachment was usually directed against offenses of injury to the state. The ordinary courts had power to try and punish offenders against the written laws, but they could not take cognizance of many offenses such as the official misconduct of public ministers. It was considered appropriate, therefore, that high offenders against the state and even of great influence and power should be tried by the lords, upon the accusation by the commons, who composed the "grand inquest" of the nation.

Environment Necessary

to Develop One's Brain

Rarely can a good mind develop well without contact with the active minds of others. And there are experiments on record which show how quickly intelligence responds to environment. Some years ago an untutored Eskimo was brought to New York and exposed to its employments and amusements, observes a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. In a surprisingly short time he seemed thoroughly at home there. And there may be added the psychological opinion that a human brain is rarely, if ever, developed to its capacity, for lack of proper experience to discover its abilities.

It is the eugenic theory that it is important to be well-born, which is undoubtedly true. But brains must be educated to amount to much. Environment is education in the truest sense of the word. Environment is a matter of home surroundings, family associations, social contacts and geographical location, plus the lack of opportunity and the ability to take advantage of it. Scientific eugenics cannot control such factors, though its studies may discover their decided importance.

Music Revives Memories

of Places or Incidents

A very great part of the pleasure people take in music comes from the associations it revives, says a writer in Harper's Magazine. These may follow one another as continuously as the flow of music itself, never, perhaps, taking full possession of our consciousness, but stirring within us.

What awakens them? Where do they come from? A few notes that recall an old song, not all the melody, but its spirit and the feel of the place and the years where it was sung. Or it may be a certain beat in the music that you would swear now fills your ears, and yet at the same time recalls within you a movement from elsewhere, a swing of the arm you have known, a remembered tread, the grace of the dance, or the march of soldiers.

The reverie may be vague to the point of unconsciousness, yet it gives us, glance at the faces about you while listening to music. On most of them, even on those whose attention seems most pointed, you will see the lines of a dream.

Under Sheriff Shot

After He Took Oath

Boulder, Colo.—This law-enforcement business in the rugged old West is mighty painful.

William Kite, who was sworn to be under sheriff in the morning, was wounded in the afternoon.

Under Sheriff Kite got into his automobile a couple of hours after he had received the right to carry a gun. He heard an explosion, but thought it was the back-fire of an automobile. Then he felt a pain in his heel. Glancing down, Under Sheriff Kite saw red—red blood. He had been shot.

In some unexplained manner the officer's revolver had accidentally discharged as he sat down in his automobile. The bullet had torn through the seat of the car and finally lodged itself in Under Sheriff Kite's heel.

He was the first casualty of the new administration.

HEIRESS AND MAID BARGAIN FOR MATE

Love and Happiness at Stake in Strange Deal.

Bridgeport.—Love was at stake—love and happiness—and Violet Knott, wealthy Greenwich, Conn., heiress, bargained with a servant girl for the man she wanted.

"I will give him up so he can marry you and give you child a name, but you must promise me to allow him a divorce."

That is what Miss Knott said last spring. Theresa Christiano swore in Superior court here in fighting the annulment action brought by Benjamin Tocco, handsome Greenwich artist.

So the heiress gave him up, surrendered him—her Benjamin—to Theresa, the servant girl who said he had betrayed her. And they were married last April 16.

The bargain was struck, Theresa testified, in the office of Charles R. Knott, the heiress' father, who is the wealthy head of a Greenwich interior decorating firm.

Theresa, questioned by her attorney, was asked about the bargain:

Q—What happened at the office? A—My brother said that Bennie ought to do the right thing and marry me.

Q—What did Tocco do? A—Bennie said he would first have to talk to Violet and started to go into Mr. Knott's private office where Miss Knott was sitting by the desk.

Q—What happened then? A—My brother said that if Bennie had anything to say to Miss Knott he could say it in front of us.

Q—What did Tocco do? A—Bennie said he would not do a thing about marrying me unless he was allowed to talk privately to Violet.

Q—What did you see after he entered the private office? A—I saw him through the glass door talking to Miss Knott and she cried. He put his arm around her and both came out of the office and Bennie said she had something to tell me.

The baby was born last May. Tocco is the son of Frank P. Tocco, a journeyman barber who formerly worked in Stamford and now lives in Greenwich.

Judge John R. Booth reserved decision.

Cowboy Saves Life of

Deer by Freeing Horns

Libby, Mont.—A novel cowboy stunt that saved the life of a buck deer whose horns were hopelessly locked with those of a vanquished rival was performed by Ted Polette.

Polette saw the deer, a large buck, slowly and painfully making its way through a forest. Riding closer, he saw that the buck's horns were locked with those of another deer, long dead, and being dragged along the ground by the buck.

Jumping from his saddle to the back of the animal, Polette succeeded in throwing it to the ground. He freed the animal's horns and it darted away. Polette said that it was near death from starvation and would have died but for his intervention.

It is not infrequent that battles between male deer end in this manner, with the victor doomed to drag the body of his victim until he falls in his tracks, unable to obtain food or water by reason of the cumbersome weight it tied to his head.

Truck Driver Saves Life

by Holding His Breath

Coalinga, Calif.—Floyd Sommerfelt, truck driver for an oil company, was thankful that he can hold his breath a long time. Sommerfelt was pinned beneath his ten-ton truck, face down in mud, when the machine overturned on the highway near here. Realizing he faced suffocation, he held his breath. A crew from an oil well nearby extricated him.

Home Made Soda Water

Nearly Fatal to Man

Pasadena, Calif.—An attempt to manufacture his own carbonated water with illuminating gas nearly proved fatal to John Dally, forty-seven. Dally tried to charge water by placing the end of a gas hose in a bottle and allowing the gas to bubble through it. He drank the solution and dropped unconscious. The fire department tubular squad used two tanks of oxygen to resuscitate him.

New Paltz Man Dead As Truck Ran off Bank

pany, were at the scene and directed the operations at the power station. The cooperation of the company was highly commended by the State Troopers, sheriff and Coroner Connor.

Mr. Dunham, formerly resident in Gardiner where he conducted a store. About 16 years ago he sold out and moved to New Paltz where he conducted a meat market in the 12th Hasbrouck building on Main street. Mr. Dunham operated two snow trucks throughout the county. He had come to Kingston this morning, leaving home about 5:30 for a load of meat. He called at the parking house and received his load and was on his way home when the accident happened. No one witnessed the accident, so far as the authorities know now.

Surviving Mr. Dunham are his wife, a daughter of C. Schoonmaker of Gardiner, and ten children. He was a trustee of the village of New Paltz, having been elected last spring, a member of the New Paltz Reformed Church and a member of the consistory.

When notified of the accident, Mayor Peter Harp of New Paltz immediately went to the scene and assisted in the operations to recover the body.

Grappling was again begun when the opening of the gates and the drawing off of a large amount of water at the power plant had failed to bring the body downstream. A force of employees of the Central Hudson Company remained at the scene to assist in the work.

The point where the Dunham car went over the bank is a couple of hundred feet upstream from the point where about 15 years ago there was a similar drowning when a car was backed over the bank by a young woman who was operating Dr. Kemble's car.

Later reports said the body was recovered at 12:20 by Lewis Van Dermark and Elmer Every both of New Paltz. It was found 100 feet down stream from the truck and about 15 feet from shore.

A watch was found in his pocket stopped at 5:40 which is probably old time. He had bruises on his nose and face.

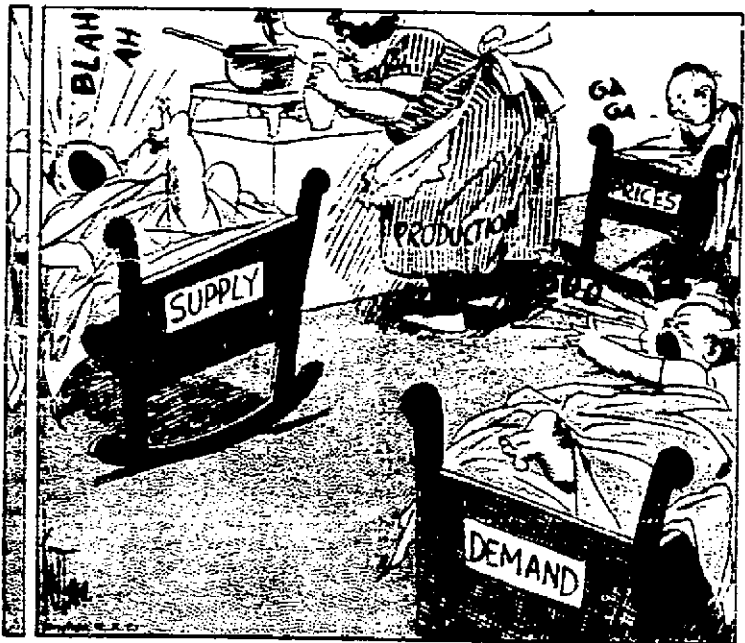

The body was turned over to Van Pine, the undertaker at New Paltz. Coroner Connor's verdict was "Accidental drowning."

Helen Takes Jack for a Toddle-Cart Ride

SINCE mothers have once more taken up strollers and roller skates, their babies don't have so many leisurely rides in strollers. In this photograph from Hollywood Helen Twelvetrees, screen star, is seen giving her baby son, Jack Moody Jr., a ride in his toddle-cart.

Financial and Commercial

New York, July 21 (AP).—The wild and hysterical stock market, after racing madly in the first hours of the day, took a sedative and calmed down to such an extent that the financial doctors expressed hopes of a peaceful convalescence.

The opening was fast, with large blocks of shares changing hands at small gains or losses. Short covering, reinforced by "bargain hunters" soon brought an upsurge of 1 to 2 or more points in many of the recently depressed leaders and some of the alcohol got back as much as 5 cents reinforcing their steps. The tape sped merrily for a while and then there was a slowing down. While the grain markets were closed at Chicago, to enable commission houses to do out from under a mountain of work, Winnipeg, which opened higher, it dropped back a little later but held fairly steady. Cotton improved. The dollar reacted sharply in foreign exchange markets, then rallied. Bonds were a trifle heavy.

Although many of the recently exuberant traders still had their fingers crossed, they were soled considerably by week-end trade reports which testified to the continued betterment in general business. Substantial additions are still being made to employment and payroll, it was said, and thus far nothing has appeared to indicate any appreciable lull in activity during the balance of the summer.

There was moderate letdown in some wholesale markets, one trade survey found, but considerable improvement was seen in retail operations. In some lines the flow of orders was said to be quickening instead of diminishing, with buyers being pressed to action by the broadening sweep of generally advancing prices.

The early recovery in some of the tobacco issues was attributed partly to publication of the figures on cigarette production for June. The output for this month totaled 462,956,757 against 10,540,212,050 in the same month last year. Cigar production increased about 18,000,000 while manufactured tobacco was up more than 1,000,000 pounds.

England Leads 2-0 In Cup Matches

Roland Garros Stadium, Antwerp, France, July 21 (AP).—British Davis Cup tennis forces put their American rivals to rout today in the inter-zone finals with two spectacular straight set singles victories.

Fred Perry, British No. 1, conquered Wilmer Allison, 6-1, 7-5, 6-4, after Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, second ranking Englishman, sprang a sensational upset by trouncing Ellsworth Vines, the American champion, 6-1, 6-1, 6-1.

The double setback came as a shocking blow to the American team, virtually crushing their high hopes of forcing into the challenge round against France next week.

With the doubles match scheduled tomorrow and two concluding singles matches Sunday, the British need only one more victory to gain the challenge round, whereas the United States now needs three straight to capture the series.

Austin duplicated his giant killing role of 1931 by taking Vines into camp with such ridiculous ease that the American group was stunned. Allison put up much stouter resistance, with the burden put squarely upon him but he was outplayed at the critical moments by Perry, especially in the last two sets.

The Americans had entered the inter-zone finals as 6-5 favorites, supposedly tuned to concert pitch, but they quickly became the victims of a startling upset and saw their Davis Cup chances crash with a reverberating echo in the boiling hot stadium.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

FORGIVENESS AS A DAILY NECESSITY

ANY man or woman who does not take for granted the daily necessity for forgiveness is not very likely to make a success of modern life.

The author of those words was talking about modern life. But it is not only in modern living that the necessity for forgiving has been recognized. It is two hundred years since Pope said, "To err is human, to forgive divine."

"The daily necessity for forgiveness."

If you do not have it you are going to be a sad, but only as you grow older, a wiser person.

The woman who does not have a faculty for forgiveness in her daily contact will have few friends. For the oversight, the neglect, the offense of which few friendships are entirely free will loom so large in her eyes as to rear an ugly barrier between her and her friend. It is only by forgiveness that friendship is kept sweet and green—forgiveness makes possible concentrating on the charms and graces and fine qualities of our friends rather than on their shortcomings.

Without the willingness to forgive, and—important—the understanding that brings forgiveness, we are doomed to a life of disappointments and disillusionment. Few human beings, including our best beloved, always live up to precisely what we expect of them. On the other hand, do we ourselves never hurt, never disappoint?

It is good humored understanding of the daily necessity for forgiveness, a cheerful acceptance of the imperfections of humans, as we hope to find for our own imperfections, that brings the hurts quick, healthy healing and prevents the festering of bitterness.

Howe About: Marie Antoinette

Cats vs. Dogs
Ninon de Lenclos
By ED GROS

I HAVE long taken great interest in the French Revolution, widely regarded as an episode of the people against despotic kings. Finally I have read so much about it I doubt this uprising was against Louis XVI and believe it was actually against his queen, Marie Antoinette.

The French Revolution was founded on gossip rather than on the political wrongs of the people. You may be sure you have heard wild gossip in your time, but you do not know how terrible gossip may become unless you have read the story of Louis XVI's queen. One story was so brutal, improbable, that when told in court during the reign of terror, it shocked the most brutal audience ever gathered, and the prosecutor realized he had made a mistake in introducing it; the mistake almost saved the queen's life.

Marie Antoinette was a German, and French hatred of Germans was as great then as it is now. Of all the foolish women in history, Marie Antoinette ranks near the top. Her history reminds one of a country girl determined to go to the devil in spite of the warnings and prayers of a wise and good mother. In this case the mother was old Maria Theresa, empress of Austria. Women should read Maria Theresa's letters to her heedless daughter; stronger preaching for morality and common sense cannot be found. The old empress was a sound German, and over and over predicted her daughter's downfall because of follies even our modern dappers have not equaled. Fortunately old Maria was dead when her foolish daughter ascended the steps of the guillotine in Paris and left it with her head carried in one basket and her body in another.

I am coming to doubt the people will ever rebel against their political wrongs, or have ever engaged in such rebellion in the past. Besides every honest citizen walks a politician to control him; the politicians at the capitals are few in number compared with the students of politics in small towns and cities posing as honest citizens.

Some one wrote (and somehow it attracted my attention) that a dog is a "yes" animal and a cat a "no" animal. Nearly everything suits a dog; almost nothing suits a cat. I have been fond of many dogs, but have never known an agreeable or intelligent cat. I do not like "no" animals; they are always cold, indifferent, clammy; I like the enthusiasm of a "yes" animal. If the owner of a dog is ill, the dog is distressed and wants to do something, but a cat, with its "no" disposition, is indifferent. Books tell of the death of a notable woman in a specially horrible way. The house cat was asleep at the foot of the bed through all the terrible scene. It has been my misfortune to know many "no" men and women.

I am an old man, but there is so much to read I shall never get around to half of it. I never heard of Ninon de Lenclos, a famous French woman, until lately. Ninon early believed that there can be only one sexual law for men and women, and her father said to her: "Since you believe that women have a right to the same liberties as men, recognize equally with men all the obligations of loyalty, sincerity, and honor." She had many men friends, but was fair with all of them. When young and most charming, if an admirer was disposed to spend too much on her, she gently restrained him. If he too much neglected his wife because of her, she warned him against that fault also.

She disliked drunkards, gamblers, idlers, rude people generally, and her biographer goes so far as to say she helped rather than harmed her men friends.

When fifty years old she retired to a country place, and the most prominent people of France of three hundred years ago were her devoted friends. Totttering old men, former intimate friends, respected her in age and sincerely liked her. One old man said to her: "Ninon, a woman who has the qualities of an honest man is the most unusual character in the world."

Ninon de Lenclos was neither poetess, actress, reformer, nor mystic, but she had the natural charm of woman. She combined this with simple fairness, and behold, a book has been made about her! She exists in literature with women who bankrupt kings!

The huge racing automobile, often costing $15,000, and which occasionally breaks a speed record or turns over on its driver, is not much of an automobile; the really useful and creditable machine is that in the middle class, which delivers useful service to millions at reasonable cost.

A friend of mine, a very old man, died lately. I was able to think of him: He had already done well; he had made an unusual record years before he died. It was a pleasure to see his children.

Remembered was so busy with his art he never had time to marry the blind girl until the neighbors made a row, and demanded it in the interest of neglected decency.

Local Death Record

Ellenville, July 21.—J. Martin Deascher, aged 71, died at his home on Center street, Friday, July 21, after a long illness. He was born in Kingston September 25, 1862, a son of Christian and Mary Deascher.

For the past 14 years he had been an employee of the John R. Hunt Corp. He was a member of the Reformed Church, Knights of Pythias, Red Men, Odd Fellows, Scoreby Home, Pythian Sisters and an honorary member of the Pioneer Fire Co. Surviving are his daughter, Miss Nell Deascher, who resided with her father, three sisters, Mrs. Mary Hess and Mrs. Etta Deascher of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Sarah Cooke of Chicago, and one brother, George Deascher of Chicago. Funeral services were held at the home on Monday at 2 p. m., conducted by the Rev. Perry Van Dyke, pastor of the Reformed Church. Services at the grave were in charge of Chancellor Commander Fields Newkirk, of the Knights of Pythias Lodge. Interment was in Fairview Cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine A. Donovan was held Thursday at 9:40 from her late home, 575 Delaware avenue, and 10 o'clock at St. Mary's Church, where a solemn requiem Mass was offered for the repose of her soul by the Rev. Stephen P. Connelly, formerly of St. Mary's Church and now pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Millbrook, celebrant. The Rev. Bernard Reardon of Kingston, who is stationed at St. Aloysius Church, New York city, deacon, and the Rev. William H. Kennedy, sub-deacon. Seated in the chancel were the Rev. William Donohue of St. Theresa's Church, Tarrytown, the Rev. John McCallen of St. Joseph's Church, Millbrook, the Very Rev. J. J. Stanley of St. Mary's Church, the Rev. Louis Cusack of St. Joseph's Church, and the Rev. William Humphrey of New Paltz. Large delegations from St. Mary's Rosary Society and the L. C. B. A. attended the Mass in a body. Tuesday evening the Rosary Society met at the home and under the leadership of Father Connelly recited the rosary. Wednesday evening the L. C. B. A. met at the home and recited the rosary. During the offertory Mrs. William Leary sang "Ave Maria" and at the conclusion John Rabie sang "Jesu Dulcis Memoria" and the St. Mary's male quartet sang "Benedictus". Scores of friends viewed the remains at the home and the funeral was largely attended. There was a profusion of floral tributes and several spiritual bouquets in the form of Mass cards. The bearers were six nephews, Charles, Thomas, Bernard and Bernard V. Roach and Timothy and Harry Donovan. Interment was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery, where the final absolution was given by the Very Rev. J. J. Stanley, assisted by the Rev. Stephen Connelly, the Rev. Bernard Reardon, the Rev. John McCallen, the Rev. Louis Cusack and the Rev. William Humphrey.

Holy Name Society Pilgrimage. St. Mary's Holy Name Society pilgrimage will take place Sunday. The society will leave the church at 9 o'clock in private cars and travel to Auriesville to the shrine of the first American Saint. Tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the school hall there will be a very important meeting of the Holy Name at which time the final and definite plans will be arranged.

Maverick Concert Artists. The program of the Sunday concert at the Maverick for this weekend features Inez Carroll, piano, Pierre Henrotte, violin, Gerald Kunz, viola, and Engelbert Roentgen, cello.

Greenland Bound. Cartright, Labrador, July 21 (AP).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh took off from here today for Greenland on their aerial map-making expedition.

Habits of the "Hoot Owl". Usually called the "hoot owl," the barred owl also may be seen in open spaces, or in groves of timber bordering streams and lakes. Much maligned for its food habits, it does occasionally take toll of poultry or game birds, but these are transgressions of individuals and not of the species.

DIED. HEGEMAN—At Shandaken, N. Y., July 21, 1933, Albert Clarence Hegeman, husband of Margaret Hughes Hegeman. Funeral in New York city on Monday. Friends may view the remains at the Chapel of A. Carr & Son, 1 Pearl street, at any time this evening.

In Memory of In loving memory of Charles B. Bogart who died July 21, 1932. (Signed) WIFE, SISTER, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

Philip Elting Old School Leader

The following letter appeared in the New York Herald Tribune on Thursday, July 20, concerning political "bosses" and what they have done for "their" country.

Mr. Elting's Principality.
To the New York Herald Tribune:

The Herald Tribune begins its excellent editorial this morning entitled "Mr. Ward, of Westchester," by saying "William L. Ward, of Westchester county, was the last of the line who held political leadership over long periods of years in this state by reason of dominating personalities." Thomas C. Platt, Benjamin B. Odell, George Aldridge, Francis Hendricks, William Barnes—all have gone. It is true that the particular dominating personalities mentioned together with Mr. Ward, of Westchester, all have gone, but Mr. Ward was, after all, not quite the last of the line.

What about Philip Elting, of Ulster, recent Collector of the Port of New York? Mr. Elting has ruled Ulster county for a considerable period of years, possibly not quite as long as the rule of Mr. Ward in Westchester. I think pretty nearly everybody in Ulster county will admit, like Mr. Ward, Mr. Elting has used and is still using "his autocratic control over its government to make it an instrument of efficiency." One of the things to which Mr. Elting can point with pride is that the county of Ulster is one of the very few counties of the state that is free from debt, and it is free from debt because Mr. Elting has made it so—he has insisted on having items put in the tax levies for which other counties went into debt and has insisted upon moderation in expenditures for alleged public improvements and on receiving a dollar's worth for every dollar of expenditure.

There is a whole lot to be said for political leaders, or "bosses" if any one prefers that term, of the type of Mr. Ward, of Westchester, and Mr. Elting, of Ulster. I do not believe that Mr. Elting is the only survivor. There probably are others not quite so well known.

The Depression Child—No. 3
By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH
"Mother, I need a new bathing suit."

The mother knows that the old one, though whole and wearable, is faded and out of date. Under ordinary conditions she would grant the request at once, but in hard times her answer is automatically: "You will have to wear your old one this year, because I can't afford another."

The situation is too well known to require further enlargement. To most parents it is heart-rending. They can stand privations and pinching for themselves, but to force it on their children seems to make the burden unbearable, and they will go to almost any length rather than let the children face much hardship or realize the straits to which their parents are reduced.

Such an attitude is not fair to the children. If they have any kind of "backbone" they are quite able to face facts, and if otherwise, it may be that a few hard knocks will make them stand up and in the end be the making of them.

If Susan is denied her new bathing suit just because "Mother is having a fit of economy"—which is the way she may look at the bare statement that she cannot afford the purchase, she will go away with a grievance, and the old bathing suit will become a source of bitterness and maybe wrangling.

If, on the other hand, Susan is taken into her parents' confidence, told just how much money there is, in exact figures if possible, and what expenses this supply must cover, it is likely that she will, if she is at all reasonable and fair-minded, face the situation bravely.

Her bathing suit will then become a banner of victory instead of a red flag of revolt, and she will feel a part of the family battle-front instead of a traitor.

Tennessee exports decreased more than $4,000,000 in 1932.

Stages a Success

That Poughkeepsie has a playwright of considerable talent is evidenced by the appearance of "Daphne's Lady," a mystery murder drama from the pen of Emmet Lavery of the Poughkeepsie Sunday Courier, which is being presented nightly at the Elverhoj Theatre near Milton. Characters are acted by the University Players, a group of young people recently graduated from college, who have engaged the Elverhoj for the summer, and are presenting productions with considerable success.

While there is perhaps nothing so pathetic as a would-be author presenting one of his first efforts, Mr. Lavery is the exception that proves the rule, his story being very sound, the lines good and the setting all that one could wish. The element of suspense is there, and it's a tale to one shot that members of the audience won't place the blame where it belongs until the players themselves reveal it.

The plot revolves around the fact that with no dead body, the murderers can't be convicted, but in keeping with the desires of the author and players, no synopsis of the play will be given, so that enjoyment of the production might be lessened.

All the characters played their parts well, and another pleasant evening is in store for those who visit the Elverhoj.

Muddy Top Notch
By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
"You had no right to start that ferris wheel if it wasn't in good condition," Willy Nilly said to the man.

"Well, I want to get it working again," the man answered. "I'm losing business this way."

"My dog is up there and he's as frightened as can be," Willy Nilly cried. "I can repair a good many things. Let me see if I can help you get the wheel started."

Poor Rip was so dizzy, and he feared that each moment he would slide off the seat. Oh, he was so miserable.

But at last, with Willy Nilly's help, the ferris wheel started working again, and Rip was safely down on the ground.

"Oh, I thought I was there for life," Rip moaned.

"Don't whimper," said the man, who did not understand what Rip was saying, but wanted to get rid of Willy Nilly and his dog. He was afraid Willy Nilly might tell some customers, who were now coming around, what had happened. So he got some bones and gave them to Rip.

Willy Nilly and Rip walked away. "I've had enough of this fair," said Rip.

"So have the Bears," said Willy Nilly.

Nilly. "They're better now but they've been feeling quite sick. We'll go and see if they're ready to start."

As they approached they found the Ducks had pushed Top Notch into the little pool of water so he would stop floating. Top Notch had slipped in the mud, and now he was looking wet and dirty, with his blue ribbons streaked with water. Willy Nilly sighed.

condition was not serious and that he expected him to recover quickly. Officer Ralph Stewart stood guard over him in the hospital today. Yesterday after the shooting Patrolman Walter Madajewski guarded him while Dr. Snyder, internes and nurses worked over him on the operating table.

Stole Another Car.

While Foley was being treated at the hospital, Chief Wood and Sergeant Simpson grilled McGirl at police headquarters. He told them that the Buick he and Foley used to take Miss Guskis for a ride Wednesday was a stolen car. The two took it from Jersey City and rode to Kingston with it. The car belongs to Mrs. Catherine S. Sprague of 26 Boyd avenue, Jersey City.

Stealing cars is no new business to Foley and McGirl. Last summer they took W. Anderson Carl's auto from in front of his residence, 138 Green street, and rode to Bayonne in it. McGirl admitted this to Chief Wood yesterday, saying he served three days of a jail sentence for stealing a car and taking it out of the state, but was released from serving out his time when Mr. Carl pleaded for him.

Foley was never caught in connection with the theft and thus escaped punishment.

In giving their history to the police, Foley said he was 19 years of age and resides in Jersey City, McGirl that he is 16 and lives in the same city.

Both are charged with grand larceny, first degree.

Hermann Elated.

Arthur Hermann a tobacco salesman, could not praise the police enough for their quick work in recovering his car 20 minutes after it had been stolen. He especially complimented Officer Soper for his keen observation and ability as a policeman.

While in communication with New Jersey police, the local department was told that both youths are considered as desperadoes with little thought for a cop's life. If they had been armed Officer Soper might have been in danger of losing his life. It is said, as it is believed they would not hesitate in shooting their way out of the trouble.

When questioned concerning the capture he made, Officer Soper said he was sorry that he had to shoot Foley and would much rather have seen the two stop and be taken in without bodily harm.

Edna Yuzolin and Charlotte Keator are going in seriously for fishing, having received lessons from Joe Kantor and Fred Smilow of Atwood. Mr. Kantor is an artist and Mr. Smilow a writer of short stories but both are good fishermen.

Miss Crawford swam the lake lengthwise four times Tuesday afternoon. She hopes to swim the Channel by the end of the season.

Saturday evening some of the campers went to Woodstock to see the play "Mademoiselle" at the Marverick Theatre. They then dined and danced before returning home.

Last Monday night there was an indoor party with refreshments of ginger ale, crackers, cheese and candy. After which games were played by the firelight.

All the campers follow practically the same routine in regard to exercise, food and so forth but some wish to gain weight, some wish to lose weight and some wish to remain the same. Strange to say, they all manage to accomplish the desired end.

But all the reducing went hay wire when a large box of candy arrived from Miss Thelma Burdick, South Norwalk, Conn. Miss Burdick was a camper here last year and expects to return again this season.

Another interesting diversion is acquiring sun tan. Sometimes they call it turkey red especially when the skin is pretty well burned. The chief exponent up to the present time has been Miss Charlotte Grawn of Minnesota but now she is being revealed by Miss Helen Spielman of Manhattan.

Everyone was glad to receive news from Miss Cora Benson, who is spending her vacation at Lake George. Miss Benson was assistant director here last year.

The hike on Monday led toward Lomontville and lunch was eaten in the woods.

Carl Spielman, the only man in camp, is becoming domesticated. Tuesday afternoon he fired the canoe then spent most of the afternoon washing a pair of socks. He then decided that the best way to wash his trousers was to jump into the lake, which he did. The strain of washing so many clothes caused him to eat three bowls of Mrs. Fuller's soup for supper. Mr. Spielman states that he frequently seeks the seclusion of the deep wild woods where he can remain unmolested by all this feminine society.

Miss Grawn says that this country is as wild and beautiful as anything in northern Minnesota. Her native home, plus the Catskill Mountains.

Miss Chambers, who comes from Wyoming, where mountains are really mountains, says that the things which she likes best are the stone walls, the farm houses, some of them stone, the rambler roses, all kinds of wild berries and the blueberries which she had never seen before.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

"I'm not going to dispute your statement that Vines and Crawford are the only players in the world who could take Tilden's measure in a five-set match today," writes my old companion in arms, R. E. P. ("Side Line"), Seneader of the Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Kuseluh did it in the pro championships at Chicago last year—something that one of the cigarette adds should remember since it calls Tilden the United States champion, which he isn't."

"But I do dispute your statement that Tilden and Johnston both were 'over 34' when they last turned back the French in the Davis Cup challenge round of 1926. Of course they weren't. Tilden was just past 33 and Johnston wasn't yet 33 that summer. Tilden was born in February, 1893, and Johnston in November, 1894, so you can figure it out for yourself."

"The question of tennis ages is interesting. In 1927 I wrote a story about it which I think you might be interested in reading."

We are not obliged and interested—having started this discussion on the thesis that Henri Cochet, now past 31, is not to be counted out of the Davis Cup picture because of age—but we are passing on "Side Line's" study of this angle to championship tennis.

It was a defeat by Cochet in the semi-finals of our 1927 national singles championship at Forest Hills—one of the most dramatic matches I have ever witnessed—that prompted Big Bill Tilden to remark, "Age, I think it is." Tilden was then 34, but he told me recently that at 40 he thought he was playing as good "match tennis" as ever.

Larned Rare Exception.

"But surprising as it may seem, 34 is really very old—for tennis," wrote "Side Line" in his analysis of age in its relation to the top flight of the game. "I fact in the list of 17 men who have held the tennis championship of the United States, only one was older than Tilden the last time he won it. This was the late William A. Larned who preserved his tennis championship ability until he was 40."

"But Larned was a rare exception. Norman E. Brooks, the great Australian, is the only other real star who lasted so well. Of the American players who held the national title, all but Tilden and Larned were out as contenders before they reached 30."

"Richard D. Sears, the first champion, won the last time at the age of 26. At 27 he retired as too old to play championship tennis. Henry W. Slocum, Jr., was at the ripe age of 28 when he was defeated, never to come back. Olive S. Campbell, champion from 1890 to 1892, passed out of the championship at 22, having been the youngest player who ever won the title. (Ed's note: Ellsworth Vines was just short of his 20th birthday when he won his first national title in 1931.)"

Burns Them Out.

"The late Robert D. Wrenn was all through at 25. Fred Hovey blossomed at 27 and was through at 28. The great Malcolm D. Whitman, outstanding player of a quarter-century ago, retired from the championship at 24. He relinquished Davis Cup competition at 26."

It is a similar story most of the way down the list. Maurice E. McLoughlin, the "California Comet," burned himself out at 24. Richard Norris Williams II, who beat McLoughlin for the title in 1914, never won a national championship after 35, although he competed in the tournament for many years afterward.

R. Lindley Murray, a famous southpaw and one-time Nemesis of Tilden, was through at 26 and "Little Bill" Johnston lost the title at the same age, although he did not pass from the picture until 1927 when he was "going on 33."

Meaning of "Heathen"

The word "heathen" or "pagan" commonly suggests adherence to polytheism or the practice of idolatry, especially among rude or uncivilized peoples. An atheist is a person who denies or disbelieves the existence of God or a supreme intelligent being;

he could scarcely be called a heathen,

as in strict use, the latter term is limited to members of a nation or race that have not abandoned their original creeds.

Tagging Major League Bases

A prodigious burst of hitting by Babe Herman, benched only last Saturday for hitting weakness, again has pointed out that the Chicago Cubs may be the team the other four National League pennant contenders will have to beat to win the flag.

Herman got his chance yesterday because Riggs Stephenson was laid up with a cold, and walloped three home runs and a single and drove in eight runs in a 10 to 1 triumph over the Phillies. Kiki Cuyler contributed a triple, double and single, and Lyle (Bud) Tinning pitched effectively in the pinches to become the 16th Chicago pitcher to go the route in the last 23 games.

The Cubs have won 17 of their 23 contests since June 28 and today are only 2½ games behind the New York Giants, who dropped a 6-5 decision to the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday. Pittsburgh remained only a half game behind Chicago. The Bucs won out by bunting three hits off Relief Pitcher Adolf Luque with the third Giant error to score two runs in the eighth.

The Boston Braves drew up to a spot only a game and a half behind the fourth place St. Louis club by beating the Cardinals 3 to 2 when a homer by Pinky Whitney and a triple by Rabbit Maranville brought in the winning runs in the eighth.

The American League duel between the New York Yankees and Washington Senators remained in status quo when both leaders dropped tough games to second division clubs.

Mel Harder of Cleveland limited the Yanks to three hits to give the Indians a 3-1 triumph and Tommy Bridges of Detroit bested Alvin Crowder of Washington in a 1 to 0 flinging duel as each team got only four hits.

Earl Averill's triple in the sixth was the big blow of Cleveland's seven while Detroit scored its lone run in the eighth when Frank Doljack doubled and came home on Billy Rogell's base hit.

The Cincinnati Reds drew up a half game behind Brooklyn and Philadelphia, which are virtually tied for sixth place in the National League by defeating the Dodgers 1 to 0.

More good pitching cropped up in the American League as George Fingers limited the Chicago White Sox to five blows while the Boston Red Sox won 5-0. Lefty Grove of Philadelphia and Roland Stiles of St. Louis yielded four runs apiece in the first inning, then settled down for a fine mound duel that ended in the tenth when Pinky Higgins singled with the bases filled and gave the Athletics a 6 to 5 victory.

Gardeners Play Clows Tonight

The Gardeners and Clow's Dairy-men meet in a City League game at the Athletic Field this evening. The teams will be battling for third place as they are in a deadlock for that position now. Bill Thomas is slated to be on the mound for the Gardeners with Luke Roosa behind the bat; "Pucker" Davis and Gene Rider will make up the Dairy-men's battery. The game scheduled for the Repeaters and Herzogs Thursday evening was called on account of wet grounds.

GRAPHIC GOLF

PRACTICE TROUBLE SHOTS

FRANCIS OUMET, one of the best known exponents of recovery shots, thinks a practice sand trap would be a helpful addition to most courses. Those extra strokes that the average golfer takes in getting out of trouble are, according to Oumet, the cause of high scores. A sand trap usually frightens such a player out of any semblance of a sound stroke. Sometimes he experiments with a shot he thinks would work and finds it will not. Generally the safest and most used method is the explosion shot. Oumet is an expert at this phase of the game and more than once has blasted opponents' hopes by a perfect blast from the bunker that on occasions landed the ball into the cup.

In the explosion shot the clubhead does not touch the ball. It is lifted out by the force of the clubhead as it cuts through the sand beneath it. The important thing is to hit well behind the ball so that the danger of driving the ball into the sand will be eliminated.

Who the Jayhawkers Were

The name "Jayhawker" originated in Kansas during the contest over slavery just before the Civil war. Bands of slavery men and free soil men ravaged farms, drove away horses and carried on a guerrilla war. The free-soil men called the slavery men border ruffians, while the slavery men in turn called the free-soil men Jayhawkers. The most probable derivation of the latter word is from jayhawk, a fierce bird of prey, which it is said kills other creatures for the mere love of killing. The people of Kansas have been humorously nicknamed Jayhawkers and Kansas is sometimes called the Jayhawk state.

Lumberjack's Duties

A lumberjack fells and prepares timber for the mill. His work may be any one of the processes involved, from the chopping of the tree in the forest to the delivery of the logs at the mill. The lumberjack may also have to cut roads through the forest or even build railways where there is no way of reaching the logs. He must be a good judge of timber, and be able to estimate closely the number of board feet in a log. He must have physical strength in order to stand the heavy work, long hours, and extreme cold, the thermometer often falling as low as 40 or 50 degrees below zero in the more northern districts.

Eyes Reveal Most About

Disposition of People

The eye is the most difficult feature to read, but if properly studied tells the most, asserts a writer in the St. Louis Globe Democrat. Three important things must be noted: Is the eye naturally deep-set or prominent? How much has the eye been changed in its position by the process of development of the individual and what is the degree of alertness and sensitiveness of the structure of the eye itself?

The deep-set eye, almond in shape, denotes intensity, mental breadth, observation, analysis, penetration and grasp of the conclusion; optimism tempered with reason, enthusiasm and force controlled by exercise of mental effort. The prominent eye—usually blue or brown but never gray—denotes keen sense perception, a person who lives more in feeling than in action. The subject will be sympathetic and emotional, with feelings easily aroused. This is the eye that is indicative of the mind that gathers information from books and from being told rather than from personal analysis; the mind that learns by rote and does not gather substance. The eye that is devoid of emotional expression indicates the functionally deficient type.

The sensual eye is dull and watery, prominent in setting, with no brow compression. An eye without color usually predicts a narrow mind, and small, oblique eyes that are narrow and sharply pointed at the ends indicate an curious and vindictive nature, deceitful, morose and irritable. In women, short, narrow eyes with fullness of the face formation at the corner of the eyes, combined with prominent cheekbones, indicate love of children and strong maternal instincts.

Laws Are Not at Fault;

Some Officials Inefficient

To assert that the evils and failures of enforcement cannot be remedied by remaking the law is one thing. To say how they can be corrected is quite another. There is no simple cure, writes John Barker in the Atlantic Monthly. Suffice it to suggest here that the end will eventually be attained only through developing, sometimes by induction, the character of the law's agents. The efficiency of the law's will be improved by better pay and longer tenure of office. Prosecuting attorneys may be taken out of politics. More important than all else, the judiciary will have to be developed in strength and independence. But, whatever the means evolved, one thing can be dogmatically asserted now. Able men can make efficient law effective; but the best law cannot make incompetent men efficient. And the enforcement of law will never be greatly improved until the public comes to think of enforcement as a matter of men, rather than as a matter of rules.

Freeman Swimming Lessons Popular

The series of five articles on swimming which appeared in these columns last week have apparently met with the approval and satisfaction of a great number of Kingstonians. Coach William J. Brooks, author of the series, and instructor at Williams Lakes Beach, Binnewater, has been on the job in the water since early last week, giving scientific individual instruction to the many readers who came forward to learn to swim.

Mr. Brooks cannot say which of the series proved most popular. The breast stroke is being taught to most beginners, while the ones who can swim have preferred to change their present styles to a definite American crawl stroke.

Outstanding in popularity is elementary diving. Many are making the best of the opportunity to master this phase of the sport. Quite a few of the diving students are excellent swimmers who had not mastered the dive before, but are now completely overcoming their initial difficulties. Different from most instructors, Mr. Brooks advocates individual instruction. According to Mr. Brooks, when a person comes forward to learn to swim or dive, he should not be told what to do and how to do it. Rather he should be shown the lesson several times by the instructor or an assistant, and then he should be taken into the water, not to come out until results are accomplished. The results come easily, claims Mr. Brooks, when proper methods are used.

That people are eager to know how to swim is evidenced by the large enrollment in the "Learn to Swim" campaign at Williams Lakes. Mr. Brooks expects the enrollment of last year to be equaled or bettered, because he knows that the free instruction he gives actually does produce results. In conclusion, Mr. Brooks states: "One need not deprive himself of the privilege to learn to swim. The reasons that keep so many people non-swimmers can be overcome easily under proper swimming conditions and under proper guidance."

The Perahera In Kandy

Highly Adorned Indian Royal Elephant.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W. H. D. Service. KANDY, Ceylon, is donning festive attire for its Perahera processions which have been held annually in the city for centuries.

There is a tradition that the Perahera processions have been held annually since the time when Buddha's Tooth was brought to Ceylon, hidden within the coils of the hair of a Kallango princess, some eight hundred years after the death of the Hindu sage, about 483 B. C.

Despite the later wanderings and at times violent history of the Tooth—it was carried off to Goa, on the Indian mainland, in 1500 by the Portuguese, who maintain that the present relic is only a reproduction—the sacred festival has changed but little in barbaric splendor through the centuries.

Today the Perahera also commemorates the birth of the god Vishnu, who first saw light on the day of the new moon in Esala (July-August). Another version of the origin of the processions concerns the activities of a certain King Galabahu, who is credited with having liberated 12,000 of his own people from foreign rule in India; then returned with them to his own domain, bringing in addition 12,000 captives and a number of sacred objects of which his kingdom had been despoiled 300 years previously. The celebration of this victory took the form of a great parade, which has been observed annually up to the present time.

Ten Days of Fervor. The processions take place nightly over a period of ten days, beginning with the first evening of the waxing moon in Esala. Each one has a special religious significance, but for the first five days the general public takes no active part. From the sixth evening on, everybody in town participates, even if only to carry a lamp or urge the dancers to further effort.

The wild and eerie effect depends largely upon the glowing torches and silvery light of a brilliant moon, for upon the "day" Perahera (only one procession takes place in daylight hours) the sunshine gives a garish touch to the glistening costumes. Perhaps the actors themselves feel the lack of spotlights and footlights which the stage of an eastern evening so amply provides.

Buddha's Tooth. In a cool, dark room, upon a table of solid silver, is the golden, bell-shaped shrine, studded with jewels. Protected from all eyes except the sons of kings and other high personages to whom occasionally it is unveiled, the Tooth rests on a gold lotus-leaved mount. A wall of glass reaching from the ceiling to the floor shields the sacred relic and many other jewels and treasures. Over the shrine stands a glittering silver peacock, from whose tail hangs the scintillating emerald of Kandy, known the world over for its size and luster.

Back! Back, everybody! A clear road for His Highness the Temple Elephant and for the troupes of whirling dancers yet to come! Hark! The whip-crackers, who in earlier days cleared the street with their snapping thongs, herald the approach.

Every one catches the spirit of infectious excitement that prevails when the crowd takes up the shouting, which swells to a roar as the Perahera at last comes into view.

Wonderful Spectacle. Nearer and nearer draw the elephants. They stop, but the halt is short, and on they come again.

So tense is the excitement when the head of the column draws near you almost forget to snap your camera. What a sight lies before you! Thousands upon thousands of brightly clad Ceylonese from all over the island, interspersed with many foreign visitors armed with all kinds of cameras, straining and leaning forward to see the procession.

The strident beat of many drums reaches the ears and the gorgeous temple elephant and his two flanking companions come into view. Then the first of the frantic dancers weaves in and out, with rhythmic step, to the beat of drums and clash of the brazen cymbals.

It requires three-quarters of an hour for the richly caparisoned elephants, the glittering groups of dancers and dignified chiefs in gorgeous robes to pass in front of a reviewing stand.

Scenes of Wild Excitement.

Every now and then the procession stops. At such times the music becomes faster and faster. Drummers, beating madly, leap into the air and prout in a frenzy of excitement. Trumpeters blow shrilly, adding to the ear-splitting din. Tirelessly whirl the dancers, stamping their feet, waving their arms, advancing and retreating, as they spin to the ever-quickening rhythm. Rarely, even in the East, does one see such utter motional abandon to the accompaniment of such clamor.

The participants in the ceremony cover many miles in their garters, during the course of the Perahera, and at the end are in a state of complete exhaustion. There are no women dancers.

Feast for Artist's Eye.

To convey some conception of the brilliant colors of this kaleidoscope of swaying elephants and wild dancers requires the services of an artist rather than a writer. A particularly large and specially bedecked elephant, with gold and silver howdah, not disdaining the use of science in its decorations, has a bright electric eye in the center of his forehead! Another in cloth of royal blue, heavily embroidered with silver, carries on his back a king's ransom in jewelry.

There was a time when the king of Kandy took part in the annual processions. Surrounded by his chiefs in resplendent costumes, it is easy to imagine his progress through excited throngs of loyal subjects. Today the king is gone, but the chiefs remain to carry on the tradition. Perhaps some of the chiefs would gladly discontinue the practice of appearing in the processions, but the simple countryman expects to see his lord in all the glory of jewels and cloth of gold. He makes the journey to Kandy only once a year, and on that day wants to see the parades as his father saw them.

Night Ceremony Is Held. But it is at night that the Perahera takes on all the glamour and weirdness of oriental pageantry.

A beautiful, clear night, with a full moon and myriads of stars overhead, makes a perfect setting for the flowing stream of lights and gyrating human beings. Smoking censers swing from hand to hand and braziers, in which glow husks of burning coconuts, are held aloft by hundreds of torch-bearers to augment the street lamps in casting a fairylike spell over the scintillating costumes and shining bodies of the thousands of enthusiastic marchers.

The coconut husks burn with a fitful yellow-red light and emit acid fumes, too pungent for accidental tastes, but they have illuminated Perahera parades for centuries and still serve that purpose well. It is an incongruous sight, amid such pomp and circumstance, to observe quantities of coconut husks being rushed along in modern firetrucks to keep the braziers constantly supplied with fuel.

"Water-Cutting" Ceremony. At the end of the procession come the water-carriers bearing palanquins of sacred water taken the year before from the Mahaweli Ganga, one of Ceylon's largest rivers, which flows through Kandy. This ceremony of the "water-cutting," when temple priests slash the surface with their swords and attendants scoop up the water in golden pitchers, is the closing event of the Perahera.

Behind the palanquins press masses of humanity, which stretch as far as the eye can see, completely filling the streets. Orderly, patient and cheerful is this vast multitude, as it beholds the final ritual.

Cooperative ownership of a handloom like this, built at a total cost of $43, is suggested by Dr. Bradford Knapp of Texas Technological college as a means of utilizing abundant stocks of wool and cotton.

Wheat and Rice Are Two Crops That Supply World

What are the two important food crops of the world?

Rice and wheat. Rice feeds one-half the world and wheat feeds the other, generally speaking. And there is more than twice as much wheat as rice produced in the world, but more people are sustained by rice than by wheat, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The wheat that was found preserved in King Tut's tomb was exactly like a kind of wheat grown today, which proves that the staple of food of the world has been much the same for thousands of years.

There are several kinds of wheat—bread wheats, the club or square-headed wheats, durum or macaroni paste wheats, and certain less important varieties. Some wheats are bearded, some bald. Some are hard and glutinous, others soft and starchy. Most wheat is grown in temperate climates, but some is raised in subtropical regions like Egypt.

Two major diseases attack this cereal—rust, for which there is no cure, and stinking smut. There is another smut, also an enemy of wheat, called black or loose smut, but this is much less serious.

Stinking smut wins its unpleasant name from the fact that when a wheat kernel attacked by it is broken open it gives off a pungent, fishy smell, which comes from the dust-like spores that have hidden inside.

Busy Program At Camp High Point

Brookhead, July 21.—Camp High Point is now running according to schedules prearranged by both male and female head counselors, Miss Sid Steinberg and Syd Alexander. Every night of the week is taken up with a different activity. Saturday night the dramatic counselors produced their weekly show, "The Red Lamp," which was very competently acted by the following cast: Matilda Deering, Evelyn Jorisch, Harold Deering, Arnold Adler; Alice Deering, Muriel Lebow; Billy Worth, Bob Roth; Archie Clarke, Herbert Hollander; Annie O'Shane, Edna Richter. Several hundred visited the performance and everyone was surprised at the marvelous acting of the youngsters. The scenery was painted by the counselors under the direction of Sid Flatow. The play lasted one hour and ten minutes and the visitors from the neighboring villages invited the cast to produce the same play in the near future for the benefit of their communities. Especially outstanding were the campers, Evelyn Jorisch, Bob Roth, and Arnold Adler. The dramatic counselors are hard at work preparing a musical comedy for Saturday night, July 22.

The arts and crafts department under the able leadership of Miss Pauline Susillo, and Len Storay is hard at work making useful articles in leather, copper, German silver, wood and so forth. In the near future an exhibition of the work made by the campers will be held and prizes will be awarded to those whose work stand out highest on Monday nights are a feature of the camp this season. The campers have been divided into tribes and compete against each other in Indian lore, songs, costumes, manners and reading of the totem pole. The campfire site adjoins the new social hall where the camp band accompanies the different tribes in their Indian songs. Many contests are held at campfires and Indian stories are related. The children look forward each week for the pleasant hours to be spent beside the blazing logs. The Ashokan dam in the background makes a very picturesque setting for the campfire.

The new social hall was opened with a very interesting ceremony, participated in by directors, counselors, campers and guests. One of the directors, David Levy, showed the campers the latest in terpsichorean arts. The other director, I. A. Greenberg, entertained the audience by his usual capable piano solos.

The water sports are a feature of the camp. Not only is instruction in swimming and boating imparted but competitive sports among the boys and girls are held. The lake is beautifully and ideally located and the water is continuously replenished by a deep water well. Every camper is learning to swim and the camp hopes to produce a 144 per cent swim corps. The Misses Levy and Goldberg and Max Rubin have made the waterfront a most attractive place for the campers.

The kindergarten department is under the supervision of Miss Pauline Susillo, who is especially adapted to this type of work. These youngsters are well taken care of and even though some are only four years of age they have become model campers.

The boxing and wrestling tournaments have been started and each division will select champions. Each camper is taught intricate points of both sports. Uncle Syd Alexander is well able to conduct these national sports. Baseball, basketball, handball, volleyball, tennis, archery, elocution, dancing, and dramatic arts are indulged in during the daily activities.

On the week-end over 100 parents came to the camp and went away happily satisfied that their children were showing marked improvement and enjoying their stay in camp. Among the parents who spent the week-end here were: Mrs. Lottfogel, Miss Noonis, Mr. and Mrs. Rosenfeld, Rabbi Schorr, Mr. and Mrs. Newberg, Mr. and Mrs. Schoen, Mr. and Mrs. Imorata, Mr. and Mrs. Sterne, Mr. and Mrs. Lazarus, Mr. and Mrs. Pasternak, Mr. and Mrs. Liebowitz, Mr. and Mrs. Sichel, Mr. and Mrs. Seigel, Mrs. Pensh, Mrs. Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Bernstein, Mr. and Mrs. Jorisch, Mr. and Mrs. Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. Lieb, Mr. Goldberg, Mr. and Mrs. Padulsky, Mr. Kanner, Mr. and Mrs. Kopp, Mr. King and family, Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb, Mr. and Mrs. Susnow, Mr. Bade, Dr. Mirkin and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wisenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. Max Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. William Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. Fosefo, Mr. and Mrs. Parnes, Mr. and Mrs. Lieberman, Mrs. Kessler, Mr. and Mrs. Richter, Mr. and Mrs. Blumberg, Mrs. Mesnick, Mrs. Weil, Mr. and Mrs. Deeter, Mrs. Rothblatt, Mr. and Mrs. Ebb, Mr. and Mrs. Rosen, Mr. and Mrs. Braunstein.

There will be 2,804 steel towers, 65 to 90 feet high, in the power transmission line that will transmit electricity from Boulder dam to Los Angeles.
